Orchard Admits Being in Mine Owners' Pav

HAYWOOD VICTORY

Confessed Assassin of Steunenberg Makes a Damaging Confession.

By J. S. Dunnigan.
Special Commissioner at the Trial for the Boston American.

BOISE, Idaho, June 8.—Assassin Orchard's connection with the mine owners' detectives, which the Haywood defence brought out in cross-examination, is being followed up to-day.

Haywood's lawyers, Richardson and Darrow, are particularly pleased with the results obtained a establishing, by Orchard's own word, that at the time he says he was the professional murderer and dynamiter of the Western Federation of Miners he was taking money and railroad passes from corporation detectives and reporting daily to them.

Private detective evidence is to be the principal support and corroboration of Orchard's accusations against Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone. Detective McPartland of Denver is chief sleuth and he will be put on the stand after Orchard.

SPY FOR PINKERTONS.

Last night there arrived in Boise the man, the State announces, who will furnish the corroborating testimony to connect Haywood with all the crimes of the mining region. This man is Harry Riddell, a Pinkerton operator, who is president of the Miners' Union at Eureka, Utah.

Riddell was denied admission to the annual meeting of the executive council of the Western Federation of Miners at Denver this week. He sent on his credentials, but Acting Secretary Kerwin wrote him to stay away, as the board was on to him and he would not be allowed to participate in the business of the federation.

It now develops that the leaders of the Federation have known for two years or more that Riddell was a detective. He was in Telluride during the troubles there and was deported by Sherman Bell's soldiers. He was a detective at that time, but kept in with the union men, deceiving them by pretending loyalty to their cause.

TANGLE UP ORCHARD.

Riddell went to Eureka and by his assumed fervor got himself elected president of the local union and also a member of the Federation Executive Board. He is now here to testify, it is said, that the Executive Council was composed of and dominated by Anarchists.

Orchard resumes the witness stand to-day none the worse for the awful confession he has publicly made this week. Haywood's attorneys are making the most of his nightly and noon-day conferences with McPartland.

Yesterday Orchard got tangled somewhat in his movements when he entered the Vindicator mine to blow it up. His original statement was that he went in by a way of the Whiting Shaft (which is the name of a shaft that connects adjoining mines) and the defence has absolute knowledge that that entrance was bulkheaded at the time the explosion took place.

DECLARES ORCHARD LIES.

Orchard next said that he thought he got into the mine by way of shaft No. 11. It is now known definitely that that shaft, too, was closed with a bulkhead, so that the dynamiter could not enter the mine by either of the routes he has designated.

Witnesses for the defence are beginning to arrive, and they assert that the Orchard story will be completely destroyed, all except his admission that he is a murderer himself. Dave Coates of Wallace, whom Orchard brought into the case, saying he talked with him while he was up north with Jack Simokins about kidnapping the Paulson children, has arrived in town. He says Orchard is lying about that matter.

Billy Aikman, big Bill Davis, Bill Easterly and Oney Barnes, who are declared by Orchard to have been the leaders of violence and the makers of bombs at Cripple Creek, will all go on the stand and deny Orchard's statements.

To brand Orchard as a Pinkerton spy in the employ of the Mine Owners' Association, and to prove the declaration of the Haywood defense that this chief witness for the government was hired and paid to commit murder in order to implicate the leaders of the Western Federation of Miners, Mrs. Ida Toney Orchard, the Cripple Creek, Col., wife of Orchard, started to-day for Idaho, to appear as a witness for the defense.

Admits He Is Bigamist.

Orchard, who had admitted on cross-examination that he is a bigamist, will find no sympathy from the woman he grossly deserted in Colorado. She has declared that she will tell the truth about the man who wilfully deceived her.

That her bigamist husband was a Pinkerton spy and that he was never under suspicion until he was arrested for the Steunenberg murder, Mrs. Orchard will testify to on the witness stand. She will tell, also, how, during the big Cripple Creek strike, the Orchard home at Altman was never searched by the militia or peace authorities, although Orchard is supposed to have been a ringleader in the slaughters that occurred there.

Orchard a Perjurer?

While there is no doubt but that Orchard's story of his having murdered eighteen persons is true, Orchard, nevertheless, has been caught perjuring himself as to his assertions that Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone plotted these fiendish crimes. By his own statements, brought out in the cross-examination, it would now appear that it would be every bit as reasonable to infer that the Mine Owners' organization plotted the crimes.

Says He Worked With Detectives for Enemies of Miners' Union.

The reason for this is Orchard's admission that long before he even knew Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, he was a spy for the Mine Owners' Union. Before he got acquainted with the officials of the Western Federation he caused the explosion in the Vindicator mine and carried out the bomb explosion which resulted in the deaths of Superintendent McCormick and Shift Boss Beck.

Orchard said that he had no idea of even meeting Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone until he was called before K. C. Sterling, chief of the Mine Owners' Secret Service, and D. C. Scott, a detective for the railroads, and the Citizens' Alliance, an anti-union organization.

These men told him that they wanted him to connect the three Western Federation officials with the violence at Cripple Creek. He went out to Binnacle Park during a union picnic and heard Moyer and Haywood advise the miners against violence and to keep sober. Haywood and Moyer urged it upon the men that if any violence was committed they would be held to blame for it.

In his cross-examination by the defence Harry Orchard admitted that foes of unions arranged to introduce him to Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone.

He was also forced to testify that he was a detective for the mine owners secret service in Colorado in 1903, before he met Moyer, Haywood and Petibone.

(For Orchard's amazing confession of crime under cross-examination see Page 2, Column 1.)

SCORE KILLED; MANY INJURED BY CYCLONES

ILLINOIS VILLAGE DESTROYED AND MUCH DAMAGE IN OTHER TOWNS.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 8.—A telephone message from Greensburg reports a cloudburst at Gradyville, Ky., early to-day, in which ten or fifteen persons lost their lives. Five bodies have already been recovered. Eight homes are reported washed away.

NASHVILLE, Ill., June 8.—A cyclone passed over New Minden, seven miles north of this city, last night, and resulted in the death of four people and the fatal injury of several others. The dead are Mrs. Henry Weibre and two children, and a young child of Carl Steumler.

The storm struck the northern portion of the town and most of the houses destroyed were country cottages. In the town the German Lutheran Church was badly damaged, the steeple being blown down and the roof blown off. The bell in the belfry was torn loose and hurled through a large pipe organ below, badly damaging it.

On the north side of the church the parochial school was blown to splinters, while the parochial school on the south side of the edifice was unharmed. These buildings were the first in the path of the storm, and were practically the only ones in the village proper that were damaged. From this point the cyclone continued on and leveled about seven more farm houses.

The Weibre house in which the four people were killed was about the last house struck by the cyclone. It was completely demolished. The occupants attempted to reach the cellar, but the approach of the storm was so sudden that they were unable to do so. They were carried with debris of the house and hurled about the fields adjoining their home.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 8.—Several persons were killed and nearly a score badly hurt when a cyclone struck and destroyed the village of York, Ill., last night. Duquois, was also struck and much property was destroyed, but no lives were lost.

Olneyville Man, Seized With Murder Mania, Shoots Child Dead, Fatally Wounds Her Mother and Fires Bullet Into Himself.

SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 8.—One is dead, one is probaly dying, and another is seriously injured as the result of the jealous rage and despondency earyl to-day of George W. Lonsdale, a factory hand of Olneyville.

Lonsdale shot and killed his eleven-year-old daughter, Emma, and then fatally wounded her mother, who was sleeping in bed with her. Then he tried to kill James Turner, a boarder, and finally he turned the revolver upon himself and inflicted a probably fatal wound in his head.

Lonsdale, who bears a good reputation in the community, had been away from his home for about two weeks. He returned last night, and what prompted him to his fearful deed is merely a matter of conjecture on the part of neighbors.

SHOT DAUGHTER IN HEART.

From what the police have been able to learn of the tragedy it is known that Lonsdale, who usually slept on a sofa while his wife and daughter, Emma, slept in a bed in an adjoining room, rose about 3 o'clock this morning and went into the room, revolver in hand.

Whether words ensued is not known as yet, but the man blazed away at his wife, inflicting a serious, yet not necessarily fatal, wound.

The daughter fled screaming from the room when the father brandished the revolver, but at the sound of the shot and her mother's cry ran back to the bedside.

Then the man turned upon his own child and shot her through the heart.

BOARDER FLEES TO STREET.

The boarder, aroused by the shots and screams of the wife and child, fled from his bed and rushed out into the dining-room where Lonsdale confronted him. Leveling the gun again the man tried to kill the boarder, but the latter fled from the house.

Lonsdale, maddened by frenzy, turned the yet-smoking weapon toward his own head and fired. He fell groaning to the floor.

Dr. E. G. Thompson was hastily summoned to the residence of the Lonsdales, No. 117 Cocaset avenue, Olneyville. There he found the little girl lying by the bed dead. The wife was lying on the bed, trembling in fear and pain, while Lonsdale was stretched on the dining room floor. He will probably die in a short time.

WIFE MAY RECOVER.

Dr. Thompson cared for the man and woman and made them as comfortable as circumstances would permit. He says that if blood poisoning does not set in that Mrs. Lonsdale will probably recover.

The coroner and the police were at once notified of the tragedy. The police expect to get a complete story of the affair as soon as the wounded woman is in condition to tell it.

While Lonsdale is a sober, industrious man, neighbors think that some domestic difficulty must have been preying on his mind. They are at a loss to account for why he tried to kill the boarder unless mental troubles had affected his mind.

As a result of the tragedy the factory district of Olneyville, one of the suburbs of this city, is wrought up to a high pitch of excitement to-day. Lonsdale was well known and well liked in the community.

OCTOPUS OFF FOR 200-FOOT PLUNGE TODAY

The submarine Octopus left Fore River this morning to make her 200-foot plunge to the bottom of Boston harbor.

The queer craft, that so far has stood the most exacting tests of the officials of the Electric Boat Company and the board of naval officers, left her moorings at 5:55 o'clock after a delay of many days, to make the most thrilling dive ever attempted by a submarine.

The unusually heavy undertow off Boston Light, which has been responsible for the delay in making the most remarkable of sea tests, is somewhat less severe and the officers of the Electric Boat Company, who are in charge of the tests, decided that the plunge could be made to-day.

Under blue skies the Octopus got under way just before 6 o'clock.

The announcement that the test was to be made to-day was issued last evening by the Electric Boat Company, and the lighter Sterling was prepared to accompany the Octopus to the scene of her plunge.

onfesses s in the Pay of the Mine Owners

CONFESSED ASSASSIN SAYS HE WORKED IN LEAGUE WITH DETECTIVES.

BOISE, Idaho, June 8.—With flushed cheeks, stuttering and as nervous as a schoolboy on declamation day, Harry Orchard, the confessed slayer of former Governor Frank Steunenberg, admitted under the searching cross-fire of Counsel E. F. Richardson, for the defence, that he was guilty of glaring double-dealing while in the employ of the officials of the Western Federation of Miners.

Far from collected, Orchard was plainly worried by the revelations he was forced to make. His remarkable story of the events leading up to the slaying of the man, who, according to his own tale, was marked for death by the "inner circle" of the Federation of Miners, was shown grossly inconsistent when he admitted in the witness chair that he received money from the Mine Owners' Association while employed, as he claims, by the union.

Confesses Double-Dealing.

Orchard's confession that he was, while in the employ of the Federation, accepting money and making reports to the detectives of the Mine Owners' Association, was the real sensation of the day's proceedings.

His first trip from Cripple Creek to Denver, undertaken, as he testifies, for the purpose of planting a bomb in the Vindicator mine, was made on a free railroad pass and with funds supplied by a detective.

Each visit he paid to the offices or headquarters of the Western Federation of Miners was reported in detail to detectives hired by the Mine Owners' Association.

The inconsistency of this double dealing on the part of the slayer of former Governor Steunenberg was thoroughly exposed during the cross-examination. During the giving of this remarkable story of a two-sided life, Orchard fidgeted in his chair, his cheeks were flushed and his hands grasped the railing by his side.

At first the witness attempted to evade direct questions put to him by Richardson. Finally, after changing his story in several essentials, Orchard testified that he was the employe, practically, of both associations.

Traveled on Free Pass.

Yet he seemed reluctant to admit that he received monetary considerations from the Mine Owners' Association. He did admit, under pressure, that while other union men were daily searched by the militia in the Cripple Creek district during the strike of 1903-1904, he, the witness, was free with a pass in and out of the district without molestation. At each visit to the headquarters of the Federation's officers, Orchard declared under oath that he was accompanied to the door by a detective hired by the Mine Owners.

Trapped repeatedly and stuttering as though his story had been previously prepared and had been forgotten, Orchard's testimony proved all the more damaging for himself, and the impression was that it showed a glaring case of plain double-dealing for gains that were of small consequence considered by the character of the work he claims to have so successfully performed.

Blew Up a Mill.

Orchard admitted that while in the Idaho mining country he became quite a gambler, playing poker most of the time. He was asked how he voted the day the unions decided to go down to blow the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine mill, and he said he did not remember. Mr. Richardson wanted the witness to name all who attended the meeting. He gave the names of five or six, saying that they were the only ones whose names he could recall.

Orchard said the train which took the rioting miners to Wardner was composed of thirteen cars, some being freight and others passenger coaches.

"Are you sure?" asked Mr. Richardson, "that you were not at Burke or Mullan playing poker when the explosion occurred?"

"I am sure," came the reply. "I lit one of the fuses which fired powder under the mill."

Did Not Know Haywood.

Mr. Richardson wanted to know the names of all who helped unload the powder at Wardner and who helped to place it under the mill.

Orchard gave several as all he could remember.

"Did you know Haywood, Moyer or Pettibone at this time?"

"No, sir."

"They were not with you at Wardner when the mill was blown up, were they?"

"No, sir, not that I know of."

Up to the time he went to Colorado in 1902, Orchard said he had never heard of Haywood, Pettibone, Moyer or Simpkins. He did not hear of Governor Steunenberg's action in suppressing the Coeur d'Alene troubles until some time after he left Idaho. He said no one connected with the Western Federation of Miners had urged his going to Colorado. At that time, July or August of 1902, there was no trouble in Cripple Creek.

Was Paid $200.

Arriving in Colorado he went to work in the Trachite mine and renewed his membership in the Western Federation of Miners, joining a local headed by W. F. Davis, who had been in charge of the party which blew up the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill.

In his direct testimony Orchard said he had reported to Davis the finding of a carload of powder in the Vindicator mine.

Asked how he came to know there was powder in the mine, Orchard said he had stolen some and sold it.

"Was there anything in your experience at Wardner, Idaho, which also suggested the touching off of this powder to you?"

"It may have."

"Did the suggestion that the powder in the mine be touched off come from you or from Davis?"

"From Davis. He said he would give me $200 to touch it off."

Tries to Fence Questions.

Orchard said there were about fifty non-union men working in the Vindicator mine. He believed the touching off of the carload of powder would have meant the death of all.

"And you proposed to murder fifty men for $200?" asked Mr. Richardson.

"I proposed to touch off the powder," Orchard fenced.

Orchard said that Moyer came to Cripple Creek during the strike and made a speech, urging that no overt acts of any sort be committed, saying they would surely be charged up to the Western Federation of Miners.

Haywood spoke to the same effect, cautioning the strikers against drinking and gambling as well.

Identifies Accomplice.

Orchard said Will Easterly helped him conduct experiments on blowing up the Vindicator mine.

"Is Easterly in the room?" asked Richardson.

A man stood up in the rear of the courtroom and was commanded to come down the center aisle and confront the witness.

"Is that the Easterly you mean?"

The witness looked at the newcomer and quickly replied:

"That's the man."

For the second attempt at the mine, Orchard said, he was promised $500.

"Were you going to fire the carload of powder?"

"No, it was to be a bomb this time."

Superintendent McCormick and Mel Beck were killed a week later. Orchard supposed their deaths were due to the bomb. "Billy" Ackerman helped him place the bomb.

Orchard a Bigamist.

In June, 1903, Orchard said, he married Mrs. Ida Toney, a widow with three children. Her house was but a short distance from the Vindicator mine. The witness said she continues to live there, so far as he knows.

Orchard said he went to Davis and Parker for money after the death of McCormick and Beck. They promised some the next day. Orchard admitted he had felt "sore" because he had been refused money for his first attempt on the mine.

Asked why he informed the Florence and Cripple Creek Railroad Company of the miners' plot to wreck the train, Orchard said he was perhaps a little jealous because he had not been employed on the job.

Robbed His Roommate.

Resuming the stand at the afternoon session of the court, Orchard said that prior to his marriage in Colorado he lived at "Johnny" Neville's nouse at Cripple Creek. He admitted taking some high grade ore from a room-mate's trunk and selling it for $10. The room-mate, John Thompson, had "high-graded" the ore.

After first reporting to D. C. Scott, a detective of the Florence and Cripple Creek Railroad, about the attempt to wreck a train, Orchard said he had seen the officer several times. He denied that he was reporting to the detective. Orchard also said he had been to see D. C. Sterling, who had charge of the detective force of the Mine Owners' Association.

"Didn't you tell Scott and Sterling that you were going to the headquarters to get something against the leaders of the Western Federation of Miners?" asked Richardson.

Sought "Information."

"I told Scott I was going to try to find out somethding about Easterly."

Scott, he said, paid his expenses to Denver, and Moyer paid them after he got there.

"Didn't you tell Scott you were going to find out something about Haywood and Moyer?"

"Yes, I told him that."

Orchard denied that he had ever given any information concerning Moyer or Haywood and said he was lying to Scott when he promised to get information for him.

Orchard said that when he returned to Cripple Creek he reported to Detectives Scott and Sterling, but did not tell them about his interview with Haywood and Moyer.

At the interview Moyer and Haywood had told him, Orchard said, to get busy at Cripple Creek and do whatever he could—that he could not go too far for them. Moyer gave him $20 and Haywood said he could get more when ever he wanted it.

Aways Got Money.

"So you never were broke after that?" suggested Mr. Richardson.

"I was broke several times, but I got money every time I asked for it."

Orchard was next told to describe the making of the two bombs in Cripple Creek which were to be thrown into the Vindicator coal bins. The witness said he stole the powder from a man named Charley Perkins. He and Owney Barnes made the bombs in Barnes's cabin. Then for a second time during the day Orchard was confronted with a prospective witness for the defence. Barnes was in the audience and was told to stand up. Orchard looked at him and without hesitating said: "That's the man with whom I made the bombs."

Barnes, a short, fat man, with large mustache, grinned and sat down.

Before returning to Cripple Creek in January, 1904, Orchard said Pettibone gave him several cans of "Pettibone dope," or Greek fire, enough to make four gallons. He was to throw it in cars where non-union men were riding and down mine shafts. Orchard said he buried the stuff and never used it. After his arrest in Caldwell he told Detective McPartland about the burried "dope," and the latter, he heard, had dug it up.

"You had no fear of being searched?" suggested Richardson.

"I tried to keep away from the soldiers as much as possible."

Orchard told of Moyer's sending to Cripple Creek for him soon after this. Moyer wanted him to go along to Ouray and Silverton, where the Telluride miners who had been deported by General Bulkeley Wells of the Colorado militia were gathered.

BOSTON GIRLS WIN AT TENNIS

Boston friends of Miss Eleanora Sears and Miss Marion Fenno of the Longwood Cricket Club, two of the most popular girls in Boston society, are delighted at the victory they won yesterday over Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Hibbs, the Philadelphia tennis experts. Hundreds of messages of congratulations have been wired to Miss Sears and Miss Fenno.

The contest was for the women's tennis championship of Pennsylvania and the Eastern States, held at Haverford. The finals were 6—1, 6—2. Miss Sears was especially strong and killed the ball nine out of every ten times. Miss Sears and Miss Rotch met in the single finals today.

PRESIDENT AT MASONIC RITES

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Using the same trowel and gavel employed by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol building, Grand Master F. J. Woodman of the Free Masons of the District of Columbia, laid the cornerstone of the new half-million-dollar Masonic Temple this afternoon.

President Roosevelt, himself a Mason, was the guest of honor and delivered the address of the day. Members of the Cabinet and a host of other Government officials occupied seats on the platform.

The Temple is being erected on a triangular plot of ground at the intersection of New York avenue, Thirteenth and H streets.

The photograph of Orchard shows him as he appeared when arrested on the charge of assassinating Ex-Governor Steunenberg of Idaho. By his own confession Orchard is one of the most remarkable criminals ever developed in this country.

OIL TRUST FINANCING NEW HAVEN MERGER

RICHARD OLNEY AND OTHER BOSTON & MAINE MEN ELECTED TO DIRECTORATE.

One of the most important steps in connection with the New York, New Haven & Hartford-Boston & Maine railroad merger has just been accomplished, the election of several prominent stockholders and directors of the Boston & Maine as directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford.

The Boston & Maine men who have been made New York, New Haven & Hartford directors are:

Richard Olney of Boston.
Charles M. Pratt of New York.
Lewis Cass Ledyard of New York.

Other directors chosen yesterday who are in sympathy with the plans of President Mellen of the New Haven to absorb the Boston & Maine are:

Henry K. McHarg of Stamford, Conn.
Frederick F. Brewster of New Haven.
A. Heaton Robertson of New Haven.

Mr. Olney was Secretary of State of the United States under President Cleveland, is a director of the Boston & Maine and has been its legal counsel in many important cases.

Oil Trust's Secretary.

Charles M. Pratt is secretary of the Standard Oil Company and a director in many other corporations, including the Boston & Maine, in the stock of which he is a large holder. His shares are also, it is understood, to be exchanged for New Haven stock.

Lewis Cass Ledyard is a prominent lawyer of New York city and a director of the Boston Maine Railroad Company, who represents a large stock holding in that corporation of the American Express Company, which is understood to be exchanged by agreement for the New Haven company's shares.

A. Heaton Robertson is a Yale graduate of the class of 1872, a New Haven lawyer, who, in 1904, was the Democratic candidate for Governor of Connecticut. He had acted as attorney for the railroad in various capacities.

Henry K. McHarg is a director and vice-president of a Southern railroad company and a prominent capitalist whose name was suggested for a directorship in the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company some months ago when Vice-President Todd retired.

Interested in Standard.

Frederick F. Brewster is an extremely rich young man of New Haven, who is understood to have large interests in the Standard Oil Company.

The appearance of Standard Oil men on the directorate of the New Haven means, it is said, that the Standard Oil Company will be interested in financing the merger scheme.

It was reported today that one of President Mellen's plans is to eventually build a huge union station in Postoffice square, Boston, at a cost of $25,000,000, and to move the head offices of the New Haven system from New Haven to Boston.

If this is so President Mellen neglected to confide in the Merchants' Association when he told its members of his plans the other day and promised that the South station would be the Union station and that it would be connected with the North station by a tunnel.

Mellen Was Silent.

Neither did President Mellen say anything about the Postoffice square station in the letter which he sent Governor Guild for submission to the Massachusetts Legislature.

In a statement which he gave out today President Mellen said:

"Every statement in the letter over my signature which was sent to Governor Guild regarding the proposed merger of the New Haven and Boston & Maine systems was meant in its most liberal sense. Every promise made therein by me, speaking for the road of which I am the head, by grace of the board of directors, will be carried out to the letter. And in more than the letter alone; in the spirit in which it was conceived and offered.

"It is difficult for me to understand how and why certain people and interests continue to place different constructions upon my statements than they are intended to convey. I am not in the habit of attempting to befog or lessen an issue when it needs attention, and certainly make an honest effort to put my meaning into such words as will convey its sense. At least, it seems to me that I do. My directors make no pretence of misunderstanding my may regard them."

POLISHERS ON CITY PAYROLL

Another designation has been found to put men on the city pay roll—that of "varnish polisher." Fred Glenn of Ward 13 and Mark Ridge of Ward 14 have been put to work in City Messenger Leary's department and will hereafter do all the official polishing at City Hall.

Glenn is a brother of William H. Glenn, partner of former Alderman "Pat" Bowen in the contracting business. Ridge, who is down in the directory as a piano polisher, will get $3 a day because of his previous experience, while Glenn, who is supposed to be an upholsterer, will get but $2.50.

ROOSEVELT IMMUNITY BATH FOR HARRIMAN

RAILROADS BREAKING LAW, HOWEVER, WILL BE RIGOROUSLY PROSECUTED.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Immune from government action, E. H. Harriman, the railroad king, will not be personally fought when the machinery of the United States courts is started to compel his roads to obey the law.

This decision was reached at one of the most important conferences ever held at the White House. Those who participated were President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Root, Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou, Secretary of War Taft, Secretary of the Interior Garfield, Attorney-General Bonaparte, Secretary Loeb, Interstate Commerce Commissioners Knapp and Lane and Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota, special counsel for the government.

The conference began shortly after 9 o'clock and lasted till near midnight.

The conference may mean that many of the subsidiary roads of the Harriman system will be wrenched from the control of the railroad king and that the "coalers" will be compelled to wholly relinquish the coal traffic which is now their most profitable asset.

"Officially" the result of the conference was embodied in the following statement issued by Secretary Loeb:

"The conference was held for the purpose of affording an ample discussion concerning the matters which have been under investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Interstate Commerce Commission has not yet formulated its report and all of the discussion was of a purely preliminary kind. After a report has been made the attorney-general will, of course, carefully consider it."

It is reported also that the so-called harvester trust and other big combinations were all on the programme for consideration. The purpose was to formulate definite plans on the whole subject preliminary to the President's departure on his summer vacation.

Secretary Taft on leaving announced that Secretary Loeb would issue a statement.

The discussion took a very wide range. Much of the time was given to the Harriman Alton deal. Every phase of that transaction was thoroughly gone over and discussion was participated in more especially by the President, Mr. Kellogg, Attorney-General Bonaparte and Commissioners Knapp and Lane.

The conclusion was promptly reached that however damaging the evidence might be against Mr. Harriman, the testimony he had given in the Interstate Commerce investigation had given him complete immunity from criminal prosecution.

PEACE CONGRESS WILL CONSIDER RULES OF WAR

Delegates Already Gathering at Hague; Will Felicitate the Czar of Russia.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, June 8.—Delegates to the second peace congress of The Hague, which opens Saturday, are beginning to arrive. It is expected that by the middle of next week every delegate of the powers will be here.

The Publishers' Press announces to-day the programme for the conference. The principal work of the conference will be done by committees before whom the great questions will be threshed out. The full congress will then pass on the recommendations of the committees.

After the first week it is not expected the congress will meet in plenary session oftener than every ten days. This will give the committees plenty of time to handle the important and delicate questions entrusted to them.

Will Assemble Saturday.

The congress will assemble formally in the great Knights' Hall at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

No members of the Dutch royal family will attend, but Vantets Vangoudriaan, Dutch foreign minister, will open the proceedings with a speech of welcome to the delegates. He will then move that a telegram of felicitations be sent to the Czar of Russia, at whose instigation The Hague congress was established. The temporary presiding officer will then nominate M. Nelidoff, Russian ambassador to Paris, as permanent president.

President Nelidoff will make an address in behalf of the Czar and will offer a telegram of thanks to be sent Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. The organization of the congress will be completed with the election of Foreign Minister Vangoudriaan as honorary president. Numerous sub-secretaries will be appointed, but no Americans will be named for these positions.

Subjects To Be Considered

The chief subjects to be discussed have been divided into six large groups, and it is probable a committee will be named to consider each. These are the questions:

First—Widening the jurisdiction of The Hague arbitration court.

Second—Extending the rights of neutral in times of war and regulating the question of contraband.

Third—Drafting regulations governing the bombardment of ports and the location of submarine floating mines.

Fourth—Safeguarding private property of citizens of belligerent nations at sea; granting a time allowance to merchantmen to leave ports after the opening of hostilities; rules governing the destruction of captured merchantmen; treatment to be accorded vessels of a belligerent taking refuge in a neutral port.

Fifth—The adoption in naval warfare of the principles of the Geneva convention.

Sixth—Regulating warfare on land. This includes such subjects as regulating the use of airships in the bombardment of towns.

A Novel Window

Every boy and girl will be especially interested in the Juvenile display which begins in our windows on Saturday, in connection with our regular Saturday Children's Day Sale.

The central feature will be an elaborate "Sicilian Carretto," or pony cart, purchased by Mr. A. Shuman personally at Palermo, Italy, during his recent European tour.

About this will be grouped many figures in the new styles of Russian and Sailor Wash Suits in an effective arrangement, making a very unusual and attractive display.

This will well illustrate our complete lines of Boys' Wash Suits in all materials, at $1.50 to $6.00.

All our younger friends are particularly invited to come and see this window.

Recommended Mrs. Glufing to Take The Osmo-Chemic Treatment for Abdominal Tumor and Rupture.

Mrs. M. E. Glufing conducts a select employment bureau at 400 Cambridge St., East Cambridge, Mass. She says: "My family physician advised me to take the Osmo-Chemic treatment for a Uterine Tumor and a Rupture which for 23 years had made my life miserable and which had resisted the best efforts of many of the foremost physicians. An operation was not to be thought of on account of the dangerous location of my trouble. I was told that I could not live six months in the condition I was in. That was a year ago. The Osmo-Chemic treatment was so successful in my case that I no longer suffer any discomfort either from the Tumor or the Rupture.

COLONEL AYRES STANDS BY HIS FAMILY IN FIGHT

Bravest Man Roosevelt Ever Saw Defends Daughter in West Point Quarrel.

ARE JEALOUS OF HERO

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Just because Miss Emily Ayres, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Charles G. Ayres, Indian fighter and hero of the Spanish-American War, dared to don a cadet's overcoat on a chilly day last Winter, while her gallant father was thousands of miles away in the Philippines, he to-day is in serious trouble with his fellow-officers in the army, and a coterie of West Point graduates are declared to have siezed upon the quarrel as a chance to sidetrack a man they have long envied.

His wife has just brought suit against those West Point officers for defamation of character.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ayres, after receiving an official communication from the War Department declared that he would stand by his wife and help her to the finish.

Resents Insult to Daughter.

It was Mrs. Elizabeth Fairfax Ayres, daughter of a proud Southern family and wife of the fighting lieutenant-colonel who really started the fight. When the cadet's overcoat was torn roughly from her daughter's shoulders on the West Point parade ground and she herself was later forbidden access to the grounds of the military academy by the officials.

Mrs. Ayres protested so strongly that her complaint came to the War Department's notice in Washington and astonishment passed all bounds when she brought civil suit against Colonel H. L. Scott, superintendent of the academy; Lieutenant-Colonel Robert L. Howze, commandant of cadets; Captain L. W. Oliver, assistant instructor of tactics, and Lieutenant-Colonel Stephen C. Mills, inspector-general.

Jealous of War Hero.

The old question of a West Point man versus a plain fighting man is said to be the principal one involvel. The barring of Mrs. Ayres, it is said, is likewise a blow at her husband, who is an Indian fighter of his degree and one of the most dashing heroes of the Spanish-American War. He has been in line for a Brigadier-Generalship. So have some of those who recommended that the reservation bars be put up against his wife.

To-day the War Department fairly buzzed with astonishment over the unprecendented action of a soldier's wife bringing suit against her husband's fellow soldiers in a civil instead of a military court. But the very fact that such a suit is to be brought caused the officials to decline to express opinions either way.

President Roosevelt may possibly make himself felt, it is thought, before the present disturbance comes to an end. He was an eye-witness of Captain Ayres's gallant conduct at Las Guasimas, and is reported to have said: "Ayres is the bravest man I ever saw under fire." General Young and "Fighting Joe" Wheeler also highly commended the brave captain.

Recently Honored.

When Ayres returned to Washington it was supposed he would receive high honors, but he was merely made a major, and later he was sent to the Philippines, whence he returned last week. It was only recently that he was appointed a lieutenant-colonel, Secretary Taft signing the order.

The influence working against his promotion is said to have been that of West Point graduates, who do not want a man appointed from civil life to reach a generalship.

Mrs. Ayres's high social position as one of the Virginia Fairfaxes, has also militated against him, it is said. She has the entree to the best society everywhere, and has been a leader at every post where her husband has been stationed. Naturally this did not please the wives of other officers, some of whom could have aided in obtaining higher rank for Ayres.

Her open efforts to secure reward for her gallant husband have also been distasteful to these same officers.

BODY GUARD OF CZAR NICHOLAS NEAR REVOLT

Emperor, in Dismay, Refuses to See Even the Highest Officials.

Special Cable to Hearst News Service.

LONDON, June 8.—Mutiny of the Russian Imperial Blue Hussars, the bodyguard of the Czar, is momentarily expected by the diplomatic corps.

Reports have reached here that so serious has the trouble become that the Emperor, afraid of all, has refused and denied audiences to every one.

Refuse to Give Cheers.

The first intimation of the impending mutiny was received on the occasion of the celebration of the Czar's birthday last week. The Imperial Blue Hussars were lined up for review on the parade grounds at the Summer palace of the Emperor, Asarkoe-Selo, near St. Petersburg.

When the Czar appeared the colonel of the regiment called to the troops for cheers for the Emperor. The command was replied to with dead silence. Again the colonel called for cheers, but the silence continued, the soldiers standing like mute figures. The Czar left the parade grounds at once and issued an order that the colonel, who was a personal aide-de-camp to the Czar, should be imprisoned in a fortress for fifteen days.

Czar Fears Grand Dukes.

Rumors of discontent among the soldiers in various parts of Russia have been received for several weeks at the various legations.

That the Czar fears another attack on his life is indicated by the general shifting of the officers of his court. Efforts are being made to discover the participants in what is believed to have been a plot by very high officials in the Czar's retinue at Tsarkoe-Selo to kill him.

The Czar refuses to see even the highest officials, and it is reported that among those barred from him are several of the grand dukes and other relatives. Nicholas is now virtually a prisoner in a small part of his palace, locked in there with only his family about him.

GOULD SERVED DIAMOND PIE TO 20 ACTRESSES

WIFE TO BARE SECRETS OF SENSATIONAL DINNER GIVEN BY MILLIONAIRE.

NEW YORK, June 8.—That, at a jewel dinner, Howard Gould entertained a score of actresses prominent on the American stage, and himself broke the crust of a marvellous pastry and pulled out handfuls of jewels, which he distributed among his astonished guests as favors, is the latest charge which Mrs. Gould is said to have in readiness to present to the court in her suit for separation. At this feast, the favors are alone said to have cost Mr. Gould thousands of dollars.

From one of the prominent jewel shops of the city, the story was obtained of how Gould spent an afternoon purchasing valuable knick-knacks, as the favors for the dinner, at which several of the actresses whom Mrs. Gould's friends are threatening to name, were the guests of honor.

Gifts Blazed with Gems.

It was said that Mr. Gould purchased rings, pins and other articles, all of which fairly blazed with costly stones, and that, when the actresses were invited to the dinner, which may be used by Mrs. Gould as one of the important features of her divorce suit, they had no idea of what the favors were to be.

At this feast the rarest viands and wines were served by one of the most skilled chefs on the Atlantic coast.

The list of young women, whose names are mentioned in the Gould case, is growing every day. Many of the stories that reach Mrs. Gould have been hunted down with so much success that it is probable they will be used in her action.

An astonishing story was told of how Mr. Gould put in his week at the Actors' Fund Fair. It is well-known that he was there every day and that he was seen in the company of different actresses.

Investigation of an incident recited by Mrs. Gould's friends shows that he had taken two of her carriages and presented them to the management of the fair in his own name.

Husband of Actress Threatens Gould.

It is said that an actress of some prominence was conducting one of the booths and that Mr. Gould's attentions to her became so marked as to excite comment.

Gossip reached the ears of the gentleman to whom the actress was married. It is said that the husband became so incensed that he made it a point to be on hand during the last night of the fair. When he saw with his own eyes what had been told to him, fisticuffs are declared to have been avoided only through the diplomacy of the actor's friends.

RATE FIGHT FILLED SHIP

The White Star steamer Romanic sailed to-day for the Azores and Mediterranean ports with 325 saloon passengers and 500 steerage.

The steerage passengers are returning to their European homes at the lowest rates ever made between this country and the Mediterranean — $15. The disagreement with the Italian lines caused the cut from $34, the former rate. Hereafter the fare is to be $35, as the companies have got together and raised the rates by $1.

Among the saloon passengers was Miss Amy Bernardy, teacher of Italian in Smith College, and a writer of note. Miss Bernardy is going to Florence to visit her father, who is American consul there. She is well known in Boston, and several of her friends were at the pier to bid her good by.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander McKenzie, Mrs. McKenzie and their daughter, Miss Margaret, were also first cabin passengers.

VISION LANDS MAN IN CELL

Declaring that in a vision last night he was commanded to go out and save the people of Boston, Peter M. Cristtensen, a Norwegian, who says his home is now on Tina avenue, Hyde Park, was found early to-day by the police of Station 6, praying and singing to passersby on Dorchester avenue, near B street, South Boston. He will be examined as to his sanity.

Will Not Decide at Present.

Dr. and Mrs. Wheeler have been spending the past few days at the home of his cousin, John F. Ide of Hebronville. He told Mrs. Ide that, owing to the unfinished state of his plans for the advancement of the University of California, he would keep the question of his acceptance under advisement for some time, and would go back to California and consult with his Board of Trustees.

Dr. Wheeler told his cousin that he would be better off financially as head of the Massachusetts Institute and that the position would not entail duties as burdensome as that which he now occupies.

Leave Next Week for Home

Dr. Wheeler left the Ide home with Mrs. Wheeler Wednesday to see relatives and college men in Providence, Boston and New York. They go to Baltimore from New York and will leave there next week for California.

The Wheelers attended the funeral of Mrs. McKinley at Canton, O., and came East part of the way with President Roosevelt.

DUCHESS BY HER SIDE

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, June 7.—Mrs. John Jacob Astor, stricken with excessive fatigue and a nervous breakdown, which began with a chill, is paying the price of wearing the extremely low cut gowns for which she is famed.

The nature of Mrs. Astor's illness is so severe that she is confined to her apartments in the Hotel Ritz, and the two physicians in attendance have forbidden her to leave her bed.

Colonel Astor is on his way to New York, so that Mrs. Astor is quite alone here. Only a few visitors are admitted to the sick room. One of these is the Duchess of Marlborough, who is at Mrs. Astor's side almost constantly. She appears each day, bearing either fruit or a basket of roses.

This is the very height of the London season, and Mrs. Astor is well-nigh disconsolate because of her enforced absence from the gayeties in which she was perhaps the most observed.

She was seized with a chill at the royal party given by the Cavendish-Bentincks for King Edward last week. The wintry summer has been especially trying to those women who wear particularly decollette evening gowns.

MILITIA DUTY FOR OFFICERS

It will be their duty to join the companies of State militia during the manouvres and act as instructors.

Orations mark Dorchester's 277th Anniversary

GORGEOUS PAGEANT, MILITARY DRILLS, FETES AND ATHLETICS ON PROGRAM.

Favored by weather conditions that are perfect, Dorchester celebrates to-day the 277th anniversary of her foundation.

Governor Guild, Mayor Fitzgerald and many other State and city officials and distinguished guests paid honor to Dorchester by accepting her invitation to take part in the memorial celebration.

Two parades, a reception by the Mayor to the Governor and his staff, banquets, the placing in position of the Old Dorchester milestone, one of the most interesting landmarks in the city; regattas, baseball games, swimming carnivals, horse races, band concerts and field games form part of the big celebration in which more than 100,000 men, women and children take part.

Began in Early Morn.

The celebration began at 6 o'clock this morning. It will not be finished until a late hour to-night.

Under the auspices of the Dorchester Historical Society and the city government committee, the celebration which marks the 277th anniversary of the landing in Dorchester of the good ship Mary and John, which came from England bringing 140 colonists, has been made one of the most elaborate that have ever been held in the vicinity of Boston.

At 6 o'clock this morning residents of the city were awakened by the ringing of bells and the firing of a salute.

When they looked out of their windows they saw that the day was a beautiful one, and in great contrast with the wet and disagreeable ones that had preceded it.

Stores Close for Fetes.

The skies were cloudless. A soft breeze stirred the waters of Dorchester Bay, and the weather was just warm enough for comfort.

At 9:30 o'clock hundreds of persons went to the Savin Hill Beach, where a swimming carnival was held.

At noon bells pealed out from most of the steeples in Dorchester.

Fifteen minutes after the bells bean to ring the business houses in Dorchester closed their doors. Most of them had been decorated with flags and bunting the night before, as had several hundreds of the houses in the city. The display of flags and bunting was extensive throughout Dorchester. It was especially notable in the residence districts.

As soon as the business house closed for the day some of the principal events of the big celebration began.

ALL THE NAMES ALL THE NEWS

In fact, all that you want to see or hear about Dorchester Day (including, possibly, your own picture) in tomorrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Mayor Receives Guild.

Athletic contests paved the way. At 1 o'clock a ball game between the Drapers and the Arcadia team began at Mt. Ida, and at the same time horse racing began at Franklin Field speedway.

Governor Guild, who came from the State House in an automobile, went to Mayor Fitzgerald's house, where a reception was held.

While this reception was in progress the Dorchester Historical Society was placing the old Dorchester milestone in its new place in Edward Everett square.

Historical exercises to be held on the crest of Savin Hill were next on the programme.

Grand Military Pageant.

The military parade, the most spectacular feature of the observance, was scheduled to start from Peabody square, Ashmont, at 2:30 o'clock.

At Franklin Field Governor Guild and the members of his staff review the pageant.

A cavalry drill at Franklin Field follows, and in the evening there will be a band concert there.

The chief indoor event will be the Dorchester Day banquet, which will be held at the Municipal building after the reception, which will be given there, beginning at 6:30 o'clock.

MILITARY PARADE FEATURE OF FETE

The chief event of the day is the military parade which starts at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from Peabody square, Ashmont. It is expected that 3,000 people will be in line.

The chief marshal is Lieutenant Dudley M. Pray of the naval brigade.

The line of march is as follows: Ashmont street to Ocean street to Welles avenue, past the mayor's house, to Washington street, to Melville avenue, to Waldeck street, to Geneva avenue to Bowdoin street, to Harvard street, to Talbot avenue, to Franklin field.

PLACE HISTORIC OLD MILESTONE

The setting of the old Dorchester milestone in front of "The Old Blake House" in Edward Everett square was the first event in the series of celebrations arranged for the day by the Dorchester Historical Society.

This milestone was first placed in position on the old Hancock road by one of the Colonial governors 173 years ago.

The members of the historical society gathered early to-day at their headquarters in "The Old Blake Huse."

"Father of Dorchester."

Richard C. Humpreys, called "the father of Dorchester," who is the president of he historical society, was one of the first to arrive. With him was James H. Stark, who in an address tells the history of the milestone.

After the milestone has been placed in position, the members of the historical society, escorted by a band of music, proceed to the crest of Savin Hill.

There the speakers are D. Chauncey Brewer, the Rev. A. E. Shippen and the Rev. Peter Ronan.

One hundred children from the public schols in Dorchester sing patriotic songs, and prizes are awarded for the best compositions upon the subject of "Old Dorchester."

Banquet and Speechmaking.

After the exercises at Savin Hill the members of the historical society and their friends will go to the Municipal building on Columbia road.

In the Gymnasium Hall in that building supper will be served at 7 o'clock this evening. This supper will be preceded by a reception, and will be followed by speechmaking.

GAY DECORATIONS FLY THROUGHOUT ENTIRE SECTION

The decorations in Dorchester are very fine. Peabody square was aglow all day with red, white and blue bunting. Engine 46 was completely covered with the colors. The decorations at the Ashmont Club are also fine.

At Mayor Fitzgerald's home on Welles avenue flags and bunting are arranged in attractive designs. Conspicuously placed between two large American flags is a large Irish flag.

Every building in Codman Square was decorated. The estates of Charles F. Riordan, Rev. Dr. A. Little, C. J. Flynn and the Wheeler Watson, Field, Terhune and Sullivan estates attract much attention. The O'Connell home on Harvard street and the Harrington and Teele buildings at Harvard and Washington streets are the most conspicuous in that neighborhood.

The Columbus Club and the Municipal building on Columbia road are the most prominent of the Edward Everett Square decorations. All of the Upham's Corner business places, as well as the residences in that neighborhood, are flying patriotic colors.

O'Connell, former Assistant Attorney Joseph A. Dennison, Aldermen Bell, Baldwin, Draper and Leary, Senator Frank J. Linehan and state officers of the Knights of Columbus.

President Peter F. Hanley of the Columbus Club, in extending a general invitation for all Knights of Columbus and their friends to be present at the club hous today, said:

"We have done exceedingly well in realizing from the recent bazaar an amount of money almost sufficient to pay off the mortgage on the club house.

Mortgage Nearly Paid

"In the name of the trustees of the Columbus Club I desire to thank the Knights and their wives and daughters for the splendid work they did, both before and during the bazaar. I also thank Mayor John F. Fitzgerald for the invaluable assistance and encouragement he gave us."

MILLIONAIRE'S WIFE SECURES HIS ARREST

Mrs. Meyer Alleges Husband Was About to Elope With Rival.

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW AIDS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Millionaire Louis G. Meyer was arrested to-day in his apartments in the Wollaston, Ninety-sixth street and Broadway, on a warrant secured by his wife, Ada G. Meyer, to prevent him from carrying out an elopement he is alleged to have planned with Mrs. Kathryn Conrad Fuller-Harkness.

The charge is made by Mrs. Meyer that her husband violated the written agreement he made with her, after the sensational automobile accident near the Hotel Grmatin, in which he and Mrs. Harkness figured, that he would not see the woman again.

Pending the arrival of Deputy Sheriff Walgering, Mrs. Meyer had her husband guarded by a stalwart man in the guise of a nurse. Meyer looked ill when he was brought down. He had a straggling growth of beard and his complexion was sallow.

When Meyer learned to-day that his wife had obtained a warrant for his arrest he implored her to reconsider her action. He told her she had been ill-advised and had no cause for such an action. Mrs. Meyer was firm, however, declaring she had endured all she was going to endure, and she was given the suppport of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Stephen Fullerton, who was with her.

When Meyer found that his wife was inexorable he telephoned to arrange to give bail before Justice Truax of the Supreme Court, who issued the warrant. He was taken after some delay to the Supreme Court and arraigned.

CHARGE THAT MRS. EDDY HAS DELUSIONS

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., June 8.—That Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of the Christian Science Church is and has been for many years mentally impaired, because of hallucinations, is the allegation made in an amendment to the bill in equity, brought by her son, George W. Glover, and others, styling themselves "Next Friends." This amendment injects an entirely new element into the suit, inasmuch as the original bill only alleged that her mind was impaired by the infirmities of age.

The amendment was filed in the office of Clerk of Court Amos J. Shurtleff, in this city just before the office was closed this afternoon.

"The plaintiffs," said the amendment, "further say that said Mary B. G. Eddy has not only been for a long time in the condition described in the second paragraph of said bill so as to require protection on account of her mental impairment from the infirmities of age, but they say that her mind is and has been for many years otherwise so impaired because hallucinations and delusions of various kinds to which she has been subject; and they say that while in such condition all her contracts and business transactions have been of doubtful validity, especially those in any way connected with or growing out of her hallucinations and delusions; and persons dealing with her are subject to a rigid examination into all such dealings, and wherever they have received any of her money or property they have been and now are bound to show full value rendered therefor, and where they have received donations from her they have been and now are bound to repay the same to her; and if any persons have in any way taken advantage of her condition to induce her to perform acts affecting business which have operated to their profit, they are bound to give account thereof and restore the money realized by them, so that her property and estate may be duly enlarged by such repayments and restoration."

CHINESE VIEW HUGHES'S BODY

Paying tribute to their departed comrade, hundreds of police officers and Chinese visited the undertaking rooms of Lewis Jones & Sons to view the remains of John Hughes, the popular patrolman of the LaGrange street station, who died last night. Death was due to apoplexy caused by over-study.

Patrolman Hughes has been styled the "Czar of Chinatown" for several years. Since 1897 he has been on duty in the Chinatown district. It was mainly through his assistance that the United States was able to round up two murderers during the Highbinder trouble, a few years ago.

The remains were taken to the home of his brother in East Weymouth, where the services will be held Monday.

SUFFOLK JURY INDICTS 1 FOR MANSLAUGHTER

In Final Report, Returns 48 Bills and Throws Out 21 Cases.

ALLEGED SLAYER IS HELD

The Suffolk county grand jury made its final report in the superior court today and was discharged. Forty-eight indictments and twenty-one no-bills were reported by Foreman Martin E. Curley.

A no-bill was returned in the case of Arthur Bascom, charged with fatally shooting Mrs. Bessie Holley, colored, a woman with whom he lodged at 36 Bradford street, South End, on the evening of May 10. Amadio D'Allevia was indicted for murder in the second degree.

An indictment was reported against Arthur Brownlow, eighteen years old, of 102 Revere street, charged with the larceny of opera glasses, revolvers and jewelry to the value of $250 from lodgers at the fashionable Brimmer Chambers, bachelor apartments, where he was employed as a valet.

Among the alleged victims were J. Montgomery Sears, Jr., Richard Lawrence, S. M. Boardman, D. H. Coolidge, R. S. Lockwood and P. B. Hayden.

The Deer Island prosecution has been abandoned, according to a statement made at the district-attorney's office today. It has been a matter that has been under investigation by the district-attorney of Suffolk county for the past three months, which investigation caused the removal of Supt. Gerrish and Deputy Perkins of that institution.

Miss Sargent, who made her debut two Winters ago, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Sargent of Hereford street. Through her mother, who was Miss Hunnewell, she is connected with the aristocratic Wellesley family of that name.

Dr. Cheever is a descendant of Ezekiel Cheever, Boston's first schoolmaster, to whose memory a tablet was erected recently in the old burying ground on the Common. He is a Tennis and Recquet Club man, and surgeon for the First Corps of Cadets.

Many guests from Boston were conveyed on a special train to South Natick, where the marriage ceremony was performed in the Eliot Unitarian Church.

A reception follows at the fine old estate of the bride's grandfather, the late Hollis Hunnewell, now the Walter Hunnewell estate.

Miss Sargent was beautiful in her bridal attire. Her gown was of white satin with front of old lace, and over it fell a handsome lace veil. She carried a bouquet of lilacs.

Her only attendants were her sister, Miss Margaret Sargent, and her cousin, Mary Hunnewell, daughter of Henry S. Hunnewell, who were gowned alike in white muslin with pink jackets and white muslin hats trimmed with pink ribbon.

Their bouquets were pink sweet peas.

N. Penrose Hallowell, Jr., was best man. The ushers were Dr. Horace Binney, Edward N. Fenno, Jr., Allan Forbes of Westwood, Theodore Lyman of Brookline, Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., and Edgar Wells, all Harvard '97 men, with Dr. Cheever, Dr. Elisha Flagg, Harvard '87, and F. W. Sargent, Jr., Harvard '07.

ACTOR KNOWN IN HUB ELOPES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Joseph Kilgour, a matinee hero, who in the play elopes, won the heart of Miss Angela J. Lynch, who attended a box party two or three weeks ago at Powers Theatre. On Thursday they went to South Bend and were married. Some say it was an elopement, but the family insist they merely went to Indiana to avoid publicity.

Miss Lynch, a daughter of the late John B. Lynch, is twenty-seven years old and cared little for the theatre until she saw Kilgour, who was playing the part of Bagley in the "Lion and the Mouse." He was well known in Boston, playing the same part at the Park Theatre last September.

BOSTON HOTEL PORTERS ARE NOT TO STRIKE

There will be no strike of the hotel porters in Boston Monday morning. The men will remain at work pending a conference of the hotel owners and a committee of the Central Labor Union.

The union had voted that its members should strike Monday for the abolition of the system of taking tips from porters by the head porter, or for a raise in pay.

One of the officials of the Porters' Union, in talk with an AMERICAN reporter, said:

"Go to many of the large hotels in this city and you will find men with families working twelve hours a day for the paltry sum of 83 cents. Under these circumstances is it not enough to break a man's heart when he gets a tip from a guest to be compelled to hand it over to the head porter? Even the man who shines your shoes must 'give up' to the head porter.

"The public would be surprised to know that the head porter has paid spies to follow the porter who takes the baggage to a guest's room. We ask the public, is it fair or just that what they give a porter for his services should be handed over to the head porter."

The Porters' Union will hold a mass meeting to-morrow night at No. 45 Eliot street, at which President A. M. Huddell of the Central Labor Union and President Edward Cohen and Secretary D. D. Driscoll of the State Branch, A. F. of L., will speak.

VANDERBILT LEADS LONDON HORSE SHOW

Entire Affair Characterized by American Ideas; May Prove Popular as Derby.

LONDON, June 7.—The Horse Show at the Olympia, which was opened this morning, is called an "international" exhibition, but in every respect—in inception, method and direction—it is an American idea, an American success.

The leading spirit in the whole affair is Alfred G. Vanderbilt, and when he was asked what he thought of the show he said:

"It is beyond my most sanguine expectations. I believe it will prove to be as lasting and popular an event as the Derby. It will really be a greater event for horsemen, for it is practically universal.

Will Try for Blue Ribbons.

He was asked if he intended capturing all the blue ribbons of his classes.

"I will take all coming my way," he answered. "There is a wonderful lot of horses at this show, but I may carry some blues and reds home; at least, I'm hoping to."

All New York society now in town attended the show. The boxes were thronged with notable women, splendidly gowned. Unfortunately for the curious crowds, there is no arena promenade, so it is impossible for the crowds to see the star notables in the boxes as one does in New York.

Duchess of Marlborough There

Below the royal box this afternoon sat the Duchess of Marlborough, with her sons and W. K. Vanderbilt. Alfred Vanderbilt, when not busy judging in the ring, chatted with the Duchess, who wore a gown of white cloth trimmed with gray taffeta and edged and ornamented with silk soutache braid. The Duchess's jacket was a short horsey-looking affair, with sleeves of loose kimono effect. She wore a white lace blouse, and a strand of pearls encircled the collar of the blouse.

Alfred Vanderbilt drove the party to Sunderland House to dinner after the show.

BROCKTON FARMER ADMITS FORGERY

BROCKTON, June 8.—Everett R. Moore, aged twenty-three, a farmer, charged with the larceny of $16 from William H. Bryant, a real estate dealer, through forgery, pleaded guilty in police court and was held for the Grand Jury in $500.

How the Rich Live, Thousands Spent on Smart Newport Fetes

By Cleveland Moffett

NO. II.

LET us consider the lavish fetes that take place every year in Newport—those famous entertainments that are described and discussed all over the country. It is easy to exaggerate the cost of these. The newspapers assure us that Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs's "white ball" cost $25,000, which is not true, although it doubtless did cost $15,000.

The sober fact seems to be that $10,000 or $12,000 is no unusual price to pay for one of these remarkable affairs. The dinner, say for two hundred guests, at the caterer's charge of $10 each, comes to $2,000, without wine or cigars. Besides this there is a first supper at midnight, after the special entertainment provided, and a second supper at 5 or 6 in the morning, after the dancing, which easily brings the total for eating and drinking up to $3,000. Add another thousand dollars for flowers and music. Add two thousand more for cotillion favors, watches, fans and articles of gold and silver. Then add two thousand more for a theatre on the lawn, built especially for the occasion and torn down the next morning—a spacious theatre, be it said, and handsomely decorated. Add several thousand more for a complete vaudeville entertainment, with singers and dancers, acrobats, jugglers—everything brought on expressly from New York, or perhaps (as happened once) the entire company of a New York theatre sent down and the theatre closed.

When you have counted all that, and various minor things—say $500 for electric lighting effects on the grounds—you will see clearly enough what becomes of ten or twelve, or even fifteen thousand dollars on such an occasion. And Newport may have two or three entertainments like this in a single week!

Expensive Gowns

One important item in connection with these elaborate fetes is the cost of several hundred ball dresses or dinner dresses made for the occasion, for no woman feels like accepting such generous hospitality in an old gown. And this brings me to an interesting talk I had with a man at the head of one of the largest dressmaking establishments in the world, with branches in London, Paris, New York and, naturally, Newport. We were standing near the Casino at the fashionable hour. It was the height of the season, and beautifully gowned women were arriving every moment for the music and tennis. There they were before us in gay and conspicuous groups, the much talked of and envied society leaders, dressed to be looked at and admired. And admiring, as befitted, we proceeded to discuss them, my companion speaking with the authority of a creator and dispenser of styles.

"Taken collectively," he said, "they are the smartest gowned women in the world."

"But not individually?" I asked.

"Individually they sometimes lack distinction and the note of personal taste. They dress too much alike."

"That's your affair, isn't it?" I suggested.

"Well," he said, "we do the best we can. Of course what you lack in this country is a court, with court functions, court dinners and court balls. You never find the best-dressed women in a republic."

I pondered this a while, and then, becoming practical, asked what it costs one of these ladies whose duty it is to shine in Newport for her gowns.

"Ten thousand dollars a year," he answered promptly. "We have clients who spend twelve thousand a year, but ten is enough. We have many who spend seven thousand a year. If a woman spends only five thousand a year we do not take her very seriously."

"You mean five thousand for gowns alone?"

"Of course."

And I was left to imagine what might be the lady's bill for hats, boots, lingerie, etc., not to forget the sinuous automobile veils that were fluttering all about us.

"How many gowns does a smart woman need for the Newport season?" I inquired.

He thought a moment. "Counting everything, about twenty."

"And how much will they cost apiece?"

"That depends on the number of handsome ones. You can't get a really first-class gown from us for less than a thousand dollars."

I protested that I had heard of first-class gowns for less than that, but he shook his head.

Would Lose Prestige

"We sell gowns for $250, and make more profit on them than on those that cost $500, but no ambitious society woman would think of appearing, say at an important dinner, in a $250 gown. It would injure her prestige."

Then he gave me some interesting details in the making of a thousand-dollar gown. It appears that a single yard of the trimming used for such a gown may take five or six skilful girls (French or Swiss) an entire week in the making. The pattern, say leaves or flowers, must first be embroidered in silk with the finest stitches. Then it must be gone over again in tiny transparent beads of different colors, perhaps in rhinestones, and finally the veins and stems of the leaves must be added, one by one, in colored threads. All this for a yard of trimming!

"How often would the lady wear such a gown?" I asked.

"Three or four times."

"And then what becomes of it?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "She gives it away or sells it. There is one very rich woman who has all her old gowns burned. She can't bear the idea that any one else should wear them."

This last implies such a spirit of wanton waste and selfishness that I pressed my informant for further details. Was he quite sure the rich lady burned her discarded gowns? Well, he had never seen them burned, but he had always understood they were, and he himself believed the story.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

AN UNDECIDED LOVER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty years of age and have been keeping company with a young lady nineteen. We have been going together for over a year, and have been engaged for three months. I love her very much, and I think she returns my love. She has several times asked me to marry her, but I have been holding off until I was twenty-one, which is very soon. I am living home and have all the comforts of life and am also earning a good salary, and I am in no hurry to get married. I am afraid she thinks I don't want to marry her, and I don't know just what to do.

PERPLEXED.

WHEN a girl becomes engaged to a man it is rather natural, is it not, that she should expect to marry him? I do not think, however, that she should urge you to set a time for the wedding. Don't you think that if you were very much in love with her you would be anxious yourself to get married? Of course, if you cannot afford to marry that is quite different, but you say you are making a good salary.

HARD TO SUIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man and dearly love a young lady. I have asked her to marry me. She says she loves me, but cannot think of marrying a man earning only $20 a week. As I do not see any immediate prospect of earning more, I am undecided as to what to do. I hate to think of giving the girl up, and while she says she regrets it very much, still she is firm in her opinion that we could not live on less than at least $30 a week. I feel much discouraged, as you know, Miss Fairfax, $20 a week is considered a fairly good salary for a stenographer. I also have $500 saved.

JOE.

TWENTY dollars a week is an extremely good salary, and I think the girl is very hard to suit. I think if the girl loves you she will come to your view of the case. Many young people have married and lived very well on less than you are making. If you cannot get her to look on it in the same light as you do, give her up, as I am afraid she has rather extravagant ideas.

TOO MUCH OF A RISK

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A few months ago a young man from St. Louis visited his aunt a few days. She received a letter from him stating while he was here he met me and thought he loved me and would like to correspond with me until April and then come here and be engaged to me. Now I don't remember ever meeting this young man and I do not know if it is proper for me to correspond with him, for if I do and he comes here and I don't like him I will feel badly about it.

H. B.

DO not correspond with a man whom you have no recollection of meeting. If he is really anxious to meet you he will come on in April without your writing to him, and if he does not you will be none the worse off.

Cleaning White Kid Shoes

WHITE kid shoes are as hard to keep in good order as a New Year's resolution. The most effective method of cleaning is to rub with a perfectly clean flannel cloth, which has been dipped in ammonia, and then rubbed over a cake of white soap. Always rub gently and always with a clean flannel.

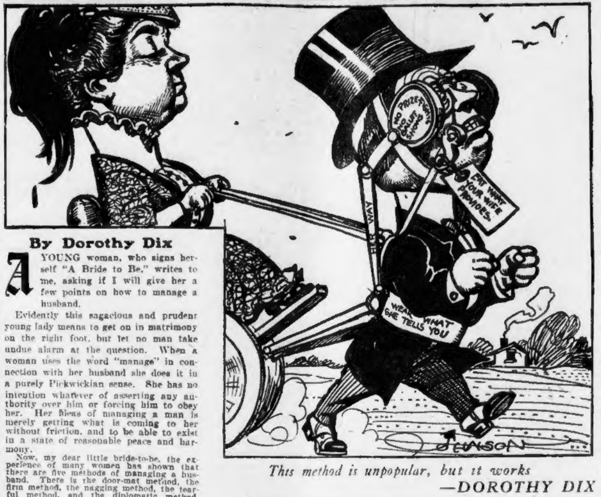
How to Manage a Husband



EAT WHAT YOUR WIFE PROVIDES
HER WAY
WEAR WHAT SHE TELLS YOU
JOHNSON

This method is unpopular, but it works

—DOROTHY DIX

By Dorothy Dix

A YOUNG woman, who signs herself "A Bride to Be," writes to me, asking if I will give her a few points on how to manage a husband.

Evidently this sagacious and prudent young lady means to get on in matrimony on the right foot, but let no man take undue alarm at the question. When a woman uses the word "manage" in connection with her husband she does it in a purely Pickwickian sense. She has no intention whatever of asserting any authority over him or forcing him to obey her. Her ideas of managing a man is merely getting what is coming to her without friction, and to be able to exist in a state of reasonable peace and harmony.

Now, my dear little bride-to-be, the experience of many women has shown that there are five methods of managing a husband. There is the door-mat method, the firm method, the nagging method, the tearful method, and the diplomatic method. All of them are good. Each one will work if properly applied, but which one will prove most effective in any given case must depend upon the personality and temperament of the user, and the usee, so to speak.

The "Firm" Method

The firm method of managing a husband has many exponents. It is effective, but bad form. It is also unpopular among married men.

Still, nobody can deny that it works, and in the hands of a large able-bodied lady, with a determined eye, a raspy voice and a commanding presence it will come nearer to making a man walk in the straight and narrow path than any other known incentive to virtue.

The woman who believes in the firm method of managing a husband begins her married life by laying down certain laws that are as unchangeable and fixed as those of the Medes and the Persians. She also assumes that she has passed into a state of infallibility, and that she has a divine commission to settle in her own way every family question. So, too, she holds to the faith that the wedding ceremony makes a man and a woman one, and that she is that one.

Therefore she has no hesitation and no pity in imposing her views upon her husband. She knows that she is right upon every subject under the sun, and she never permits herself to be turned from her viewpoint by such a paltry fact as that he doesn't like that way of doing things and has different tastes and habits that he acquired previous to having married her.

Procedure Is Simple

This makes her method of procedure perfectly simple. She does not coddle her husband, as weaker women do, and indulge him in his little fads and whims and permit him to smoke all over the place and scatter newspapers from one end of the house to the other. Far from it. There are certain things that she simply won't have, and she settles them once and for all, without argument. She never argues. An absolute dictator never has occasion to.

We have many pertinent illustrations all about us of how the woman who believes in the firm method of managing a husband applies her theories. One of the most interesting is the way in which she makes him eat what she considers good for his digestion instead of the thing that his palate craves. Considering that the man of a house almost universally pays for the food that is consumed within it, it would seem to the casual observer that he had a right to have his tastes catered to, but no such weak view of the subject troubles the firm lady who is determined that he shall eat and drink what she thinks he ought to instead of what he wants.

He may have a fondness for highly seasoned dishes, and a craving for lobster, and terrapin, and Welsh rabbits at midnight, but if she happens to be a cereally inclined lady who believes that coffee should be made out of oats instead of Mocha it is the health food messes for his. Men are so ashamed of being henpecked that they cover up their scars as much as possible, but if we only knew the number of those who never have a real good, square meal of the things they like except when they sneak off from their wives and gorge themselves at a restaurant the world would be touched to tears.

The Wife High-Handed

With the same high hand the woman who believes in the firm method of managing a husband settles his comings and goings. She would consider it foolish and childish to consult a mere husband about such matters. She does not say, "William, we have received invitations to the Blanks's reception. Would you like to go? Shall I accept for us?" Or, "Let's go and see the new Ibsen play." On the contrary the first that the luckless William knows of it is her announcement, "William, come home early to dinner to-night, for we are going to the Blanks's reception;" or, "William, bring home tickets for the Ibsen play. We are going to-morrow night."

It does not matter to her that poor William would rather go through any torture of the Inquisition than to have to stand around and giggle, and smirk, and smile, and shout inanities at others for a couple of hours after he has put in a hard and wearisome day's work at his office or that to him Ibsen is the abomination of desolation and incomprehensibility. She knows what is best for him socially and mentally, and she is not going to be guilty of the weakness of those silly, husband-spoiling women who actually permit their husbands to belong to clubs, and go to them, and attend musical comedies whenever they like. Heavens, what's a wife for except to police her husband, and to make him do the things that he doesn't want to do?

Icy to Husband's Friends

In the same way the firm woman disposes of her husband's old friends and his family if she doesn't happen to like them. She simply won't have them in the house, and turns upon them a shoulder so frigid that they flee from her presence as from an iceberg. Every married woman knows nine hundred and ninety-nine different ways to make her husband's old acquaintances feel that she regards them as immoral, undesirable, light-minded, immaterial, irrelevant, and not in her social set, anyway, and to impress on his relatives that they are the most de trop people on earth. It may mortify poor William to death, and almost break his heart, to be separated from those whose love is true and tried, but he can't help himself if his wife has determined that they shall go.

Of course, no man gives in to the firm method of being managed without a struggle, and only too often the divorce court is called on to referee the fight. Generally, however, the man submits, and spends his life meekly obeying his wife, who treats him like a little boy, and not a very smart little boy at that. She walks ahead in the street car and tells him where to sit, and he sits. She grabs the bill of fare at the restaurant, and orders what he is to eat, and he eats it. She goes to the tailor's and picks out his clothes, and he wears them, and on Sundays he tags up the aisle at church in her wake and worships God according to the dictates of his wife's conscience. Occasionally he sums up enough spirit to try to rebel, but such is the power of the human eye, when it happens to be your wife's eye, that one glance of it quells him, and at her "Will-yum" he slinks back and heels again.

There is one trouble, though, about the firm method of managing a husband. It makes a man into a sneak, and it leaves him a mighty cheerful widower.

Women Who Boast of Unpopularity With Sisters Are Tactless

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

AT a charming little luncheon party of ten bright women one of the guests arose and said to her hostess: "Won't you and your husband come up next Sunday afternoon and join a few of our friends? Tell your husband he will not be bored by finding many women there. I am a man's woman, and usually have many more men than women about."

Of course the speech was tactless, to use a mild word. Many a hostess would have thought it insulting her hospitality. But this one regarded it as merely silly, and the result of an inordinate vanity on the part of the speaker.

She herself was a popular woman with the stern sex, and never found any difficulty in filling her drawing rooms with interesting men when she desired their presence.

But she possessed the additional quality of being popular with her own sex.

Easy to Please Men

It is not difficult for a woman to be popular with men.

I have seen a girl utterly devoid of beauty, and without education or marked intellectual endowments, shine as a charmer of men.

She simply knew how to make men talk, and she knew how to LISTEN.

Men are like children, and they like to be entertained and amused. They like friends who show an interest in their personal lives, and who enter into their personal foibles.

A little sympathy, a little self-effacement, a little tact, a little attention, and a woman will be popular with men, no matter what accomplishments she lacks and how devoid of personal beauty she may be.

The woman who goes about proclaiming herself "a man's woman," can be described in a few sentences. One does not need to meet her to know her type.

She is selfish to the core, vain, and filled with a secret jealousy of all other women.

She usually possesses just enough physical attraction to make her conceited and to give her the reputation of prettiness.

She is seldom beautiful, for the really beautiful and bright woman can afford to be more generous toward others and does not need to talk of her popularity with men. It is understood.

The woman who prides herself on not being "a woman's woman" and not having many friends of her own sex is always one who is tactless, and usually one who is malicious in her speech. She antagonizes her sister women and then attributes their indifference to jealousy of her charms.

A Woman's Woman

The great glory of Madame Recamier, one of the world-famed beauties, was her equal popularity with men and women.

Napoleon Bonaparte tried vainly to win her favor, and finally exiled her from France, because her salon was filled with the great men of the day and he believed the hostess hostile to his reign and feared her power.

Yet she was beloved by all women who came into her presence, for her tact and goodness quickly destroyed jealousy, so that her female friends readily sang the praises of her beauty and brilliancy.

No woman was ever universally unpopular with her own sex merely because she was a favorite with men.

Always can the true cause be traced to her unkindness, or rudeness, or selfishness, in her association with other women.

A man will flatter and pretend to admire a vain woman who seeks to be a power with his sex when in his secret heart he pities or despises her.

It would be a painful ordeal to many "a man's woman" were she to hear the comments passed upon her by those satellites she believes her victims.

No worth-while man really admires a woman, who is unpopular with her own sex.

It is unwise for a woman to go about advertising this fact, for every intelligent observer knows the cause and knows it is not to her credit.

Why the Business Girl Makes the Best of Wives

IT is sometimes said that women who have been in business make less desirable wives than their sisters whose lives have been wholly domestic, but the question is a moot one.

On the other side, it is maintained that the effect of a business training is not so much to the woman's advantage as to her husband's, for her past experience makes her peculiarly sympathetic to the trials and difficulties of a business man, and to have a greater respect and regard for him as the bread-winner than she could have had if her knowledge of life had been gained solely in the quiet realm of home.

This idea seems sensible, for every wage-earning woman knows perfectly well that success is only attained by close attention and single-mindedness.

Realizing this for herself, she must also realize that the same rule holds good for the business man. Therefore, she has a keener consideration and sympathy for the business member of the household than would be possible in the wife, sister or daughter whose whole knowledge of business was simple hearsay.

There is no fear of the ex-business woman asking her husband, "Just to look in at Dash's sale on the way to the office and get one of those lovely fans advertised to-day," or to come home an hour earlier to go to Mrs. Brown's tea-fight, because "it's so horrid to have to go alone."

These are things many a young wife might do, but she has had practical experience that it is this sort of thing which is the ruination of business, and she has probably made up her mind to be independent of her husband in small domestic and social matters.

The ex-business woman may have something to learn from her home sister in matters pertaining to housekeeping, but with a little application and trouble she may soon learn all that is necessary, and the habits and methods and punctuality she acquired in the past will be most useful to her in the present.

Instead of being a hindrance, her former experience will probably help her to become "man's best possession—a sympathetic wife."

The Kiss

A THING of no use to one, but much prized by two.

The baby's right, the lover's privilege, the parent's benison and the hypocrite's mask.

The flag of truce in the petty wars of courtship and marriage.

The acme of agony to a bashful man.

The only known "smack" that will calm a storm.

Nothing, divided between two.

Not enough for one, just enough for two, too much for three.

The only really agreeable two-faced action under the sun or the moon either.

A woman's most effective argument, whether to cajole the heart of a father, control the humors of a husband or console the griefs of childhood.

The thunder clap of the lips, which inevitably follows the lightning glance of the eyes.

A report at headquarters.

What the child receives free, what the young man steals, and what the old man buys.

A woman's trump card in the game of love.

"IT will take more than your word to convince me of your innocence in this," he said, still coldly. "You can't go against facts, my boy; and the facts are here, clear as daylight against you."

"What facts?" demanded Jack. His face was crimson again now, and his eyes had the gleam of resentful anger in them. The other proceeded to explain. "The date on the check is on the second of June, that is to say, the day after your secret visit to New York to borrow money from me.

"Next we have the fact of you being in great need of money. You had written to Harding, and he, wiser than I, had refused to lend you any. You were in desperate straits—such desperate straits that you had to borrow your railway fare—to come to me and ask me to help you. If you wanted $500 or so you might as well have said so, and I might have been fool enough to let you have it, you being frank about your difficulties.

"You said that $250 would set you straight. It may have been nervousness that led you to misinterpret the case. I dare to say so. I am not going so far as to say that when you understood your needs you already contemplated obtaining by fraud the necessary money to allay them.

"I believe the temptation came to you during my momentary absence from the room, when we were interrupted by hearing somebody coming. You remember that when I left the room I had already made out your check for $300 and handed it to you? The interruption only prevented me from putting away the check book."

Jack nodded. "I remember," he said hoarsely, "you left the check book open on the table, and I left the room immediately after you. I didn't know who it was that had come, and I was afraid of being discovered there."

Gilbert Wynn's lip curled.

"I have no doubt you left the room as soon as possible after I did," he said with scathing sarcasm. "But let me take the circumstances in succession. I left you in the room with the open check book; I went out and found that the person coming up the drive was Mrs. Heath. She was in a great hurry, and I was glad of the fact, as there was therefore less risk of her seeing you.

"She only stayed a few minutes, and then, after escorting her down to the gates, I came in again. I went into the room at once, expecting to find you still there. You were not there. The check book was still open on the table, and I took it up to lock it away in the cabinet. As I did so I noticed that the check next to the one I had made out for you had been torn out.

"As there was no writing on the margin I thought I must myself have torn out two leaves instead of one by mistake; and when I saw you next I asked you if I had given you a blank check folded up with the other. You said no; but I know now that was a lie, or else you had torn out the blank leaf yourself with the deliberate intention of filling it in and forging my signature upon it."

"Look here, Wynn——"

With angry remonstrance in his glance and gesture, the young man had sprung forward again. But Wynn restrained him, silencing him with uplifted hand.

"Wait a bit—don't speak yet. You asked for the facts, and I am giving them to you. The proof that you took the blank leaf lies in this—that the number of this check shows it to be the one following that which I had myself made out for you for $300. Another very significant point in connection with the affair is that about an hour previously I had told you that I could afford to lend you the $300 because my balance at the bank had been increased to the extent of $3,500 by that racing coup.

"You knew, therefore, that there would be money to meet the forged draft. The next fact that tells against you is this: That having only honestly borrowed $300, you went back to Harvard and immediately paid bills to the amount of nearly $500; yes, and, as I hear, had money left after that. This can only admit of one interpretation——"

"Wait!" interrupted Jack Heath, with a certain fierce sullenness in his tone. "The rest of the money had been sent to me. When I got back I found a letter with $250 in it——"

"From whom?"

"I don't know. It was sent to me anonymously."

Gilbert Wynn laughed outright.

Insults from Wynn

"A fine explanation! I am afraid, my dear fellow, that you are not so clever at excuses as you are at forgery. Do you take me for a fool? Two hundred and fifty dollars sent to you anonymously! Whom do you think you will get to believe that story? People are not so generous as to play gratuitously the part of secret good angel to imprudent young men at college, and you must understand that no one but Alfred Harding knew of your difficulties. This mysterious money did not come from him, I suppose?"

"No," Jack answered, with commendable self-control, choosing to ignore the insulting irony of the other's tone. "I have asked him indirectly, and I find he did not send it."

"So I thought," retorted Wynn; "and I imagine you will find it difficult to prove that anybody else did. And now for the last in my list of damning facts. I owed a small bill, $25 I think it was, to Gibson, the hotel man in Elgin. You caused that bill to be paid with this check, which is, in fact, made payable to Gibson. You knew that whenever I stayed in Elgin I was in the habit of getting whatever ready money I wanted by cashing it through him. For this reason he was familiar enough with me and my name to have no suspicions about the draft, even though it was for so large an amount. He gave your messenger the change—somewhere about $450."

"My messenger!"

"Yes, some woman or other; at least, Gibson tells me that the person who paid the account was a woman. Gibson didn't recognize her. To the best of his knowledge he had never seen her before."

"Did she say she came from me?" Jack Heath demanded in a thick, unsteady voice. "Did she say she had been sent by me?"

"I have not been informed upon that point as yet," Gilbert Wynn returned dryly. "I dare say if you go and interview Gibson he will give you all the details you require. But you see that it is of no use to try to wriggle out of the affair with me. Whether or not I make the matter public, I am perfectly convinced that it was you, and nobody else, who forged my signature. I suppose you know what the penalty of this little trick would be if I had you up before the courts?"

The Anonymous Gift

"I don't know, and I don't care," retorted the young fellow recklessly. "Have me up before them if you like—if you choose to take such a mad step. I tell you the truth about the matter, so far as I know it. I give you the word of a man that I haven't done this thing. The whole business looks fishy, I own; but I should have thought you knew me better than to suppose that I had a hand in it. As to the extra money I spent at Harvard, it was sent to me, as I told you, anonymously. A few lines came with it, begging me to accept it as a present. I've burnt the letter now—if it could be called a letter, but I showed it to one or two of the fellows, and they said the handwriting seemed to be a disguised one."

"I have no doubt whatever that it was your own handwriting disguised," said Wynn coolly. "A very clever little device, my boy, to explain your possession of the extra $250. But it won't go down with me—nor with anybody else, I should think. In consideration of the fact that Pauline is to be my wife, I may hold my tongue about this affair—that is, as far as the public is concerned; but your father must be informed of it."

"The governor? For heaven's sake Wynn, don't let him know anything about it! Where's the use? You'll only set him prying into the other affairs—the debts, and the betting, and the ——"

"The drink?" queried Wynn.

Jack Heath's boyish face worked agitatedly. He pressed the palm of his unsteady right hand hard against the trunk of one of the oaks under whose shade they stood. But he said nothing.

"I suppose it's only what might have been expected," continued Wynn in a voice whose quiet irony was more cruel than the most violent abuse. "Inherited evil is bound to show itself sooner or later."

"Inherited evil?" The young fellow drew close to him again, his blue eyes aflame with dangerous light "Inherited from whom do you mean?"

Gilbert Wynn turned on his heel as he saw Maud Harding and her father approaching in the distance.

"Ask your father," he said sneeringly over his shoulder.

EGGS IN CASES

BREAK six eggs and leave the yolks in half of the shell, taking care to keep them unbroken. Beat whites until very stiff and arrange on a buttered platter. Make hollows in the whites and drop a yolk in each nest thus made. Dredge with salt and pepper and put a bit of butter on each yolk. Bake in a moderate oven till set—from 5 to 8 minutes. Garnish with parsely and serve from dish in which they are cooked.

A. M. GOVE.

No. 6 Copeland street, Quincy.

LEMON MARMALADE

TAKE six lemons cut in quarters, remove the seeds and cut the pulp very fine, cutting the rind in very thin, feathery strips. Cover with a pint of cold water, let stand over night, then boil uncovered one hour. Set aside over night again, then boil one hour uncovered, with three pounds of granulated sugar. One hour after the sugar is put in it is ready for use, and will keep any length of time unsealed. This is very nice for layer cake and turnovers.

MISS G. BAKER.

No. 7 Hyde Park avenue, Forest Hills.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

MAKE a rich biscuit dough—two cups flour sifted twice, the second time with one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream tartar and a pinch of salt. Then rub in well one large spoonful of butter and wet the whole with enough sweet milk to make a dough that can be handled. Turn it out on board, flour a little to keep from sticking to the hands, but do not roll it. Put into a deep Washington pie tin, smooth it down, prick well with a fork and bake in quick oven. When done take from tin, split and butter each half. Then spread with strawberries prepared beforehand.

Take one quart of berries, one and one-half cups of sugar well mashed, let stand an hour or two. Before using beat the white of an egg (not too stiff) and whip into the berries thoroughly. Then spread between halves of the cake, putting a good supply on top, piling the whole with whipped cream.

RHUBARB SAUCE CAKE

STEW rhubarb and add a little sugar to it and then let it get cold. Add two cups sugar, one cup shortening, two cups of the rhubarb sauce, three cups flour, two teaspoonfuls saleratus, two cups raisins, and one spoonful of spices. This recipe makes two loaves of cake. Bake 45 minutes.

MRS. JOHN HEALD, JR.,

No. 14 Shawmut Park, Newton Upper Falls.

RED TOMATO CATSUP

WASH ripe tomatoes and cut into pieces without peeling. Cook about half an hour, using a very little water to keep it from burning at first. Strain through a fine sieve, mashing through as much pulp as possible. To four quarts of juice add one pint of cider vinegar, two tablespoons of salt and three of sugar, one-half cup whole pickle spices and boil down one-half. Strain into bottles and seal. Ground spices and too much cooking makes it dark.

SUNDAY AMERICAN

WHAT THE 400 ARE WEARING. BY MRS. CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER, IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN

WEATHER MAN WOULDN'T BET EITHER WAY

Prophet Smith Officially Says Cloudy Sunday, but Admits May Be Sunshine.

ALL A GUESS, ANYHOW

Official Weather Prophet Smith is in a quandary. Personally he does not believe Boston is to have any rain to-morrow, but there are some things happening in Pennsylvania as a result of atmospheric troubles which began in the Middle West which have made him take a middle course in his prediction for Sunday weather.

This is what he has handed out—officially for to-morrow: "Partly cloudy to cloudy."

Privately he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter this morning: "I would not bet one way or the other."

Away out in the Middle West there have been some rain storms and to-day they had sneaked along as far as Pennsylvania and telegrams fro mthe weather centres in that State say "wet and disagreeable."

Last night it looked as if the rain was headed directly for Boston, but some high pressure and some low pressure have begun to do battle with each other and the rain may be held in Pennsylvania.

"Don't quote me," whispered Mr. Smith early to-day, "but if there should be sunshine in Boston to-mirrow I would not be surprised."

All of which goes to show that everyone in Boston is entitled to a Sunday weather guess and that anyone is as liable to get the answer as Mr. Smith.

WOMEN RUSH TO DEFENCE OF MISS GRIGSBY

Beautiful Protege of Yerkes Innocently Accused By Wife, They Say

NAMED IN DIVORCE SUIT

NEW YORK, June 8.—Beautiful Emilie Grigsby, protege of the late Charles T. Yerkes, heroine of a novel by Henry James and a society favorite in Europe, has been made the principal in another romance.

Jealousy of Miss Grigsby, according to report, is the reason for a divorce suit brought by Mrs. Julia A. Loomis of Tuxedo, wife of the widely known physician, Dr. Henry P. Loomis, of No. 58 East Thirty-fourth street. The suit is based upon incidents connected with a trip abroad taken by Mr. and Mrs. Loomis last Summer.

Oddly enough, this latest human comedy had its inception in the final tragedy in the life of the great traction millionaire. When Yerkes lay dying in the Waldorf-Astoria, attended by Dr. Loomis, he expressed a strong desire to see Miss Grigsby. Thinking that her presence might have a beneficial effect upon his patient, Dr. Loomis consented and she was brought to the hotel.

There at the bedside of the dying man she met Mrs. Yerkes, who afterward became the wife of Wilson Mizner. Mrs. Yerkes bitterly upbraided the beautiful girl, whom she charged with being the cause of the estrangement between her and her husband. Miss Grigsby remained by the patient until he died, however, while his wife returned to their Fifth Avenue home.

The acquaintance between Dr. Loomis and Miss Grigsby, begun under such tragic conditions, is said to have ripened into a warm friendship. The beautiful young woman made her home in the miniature palace, 660 Park avenue, which Yerkes gave her.

In her present difficulty, as in former affairs, Miss Grigsby has warm defenders. Her friends assert that Mrs. Loomis has no cause for jealousy whatever. They say that her acquaintance with Dr. Loomis never progressed beyond the most casual relations.

Miss Grigsby's charm has always made her secure in the friendship of many persons always ready to take up her defence. During the publicity following the Yerkes episode, some of the most prominent women in New York society spoke warmly in her defence. One of these was Mrs. James P. Kernochan, who met her abroad and was charmed with her. In England Mrs. Grigsby has met and been welcomed in the most exclusive circles, and her cleverness and beauty have made her a social favorite.

While in London Miss Grigsby met Henry James, the famous author, who became her devoted admirer. He has drawn a vivid, glowing picture of the beautiful girl in his novel, "The Wings of a Dove," in which she appears as the heroine, Mildred Theale, of wonderful beauty and fabulous wealth.

COHAN WEDS JULY FOURTH

George Cohan, the young actor and song writer, will wed on his birthday, July fourth, in New York city, according to his plans made public to-day. Cohan's bride will be Miss Agnes Nolan, a Brookline girl. The young actor's early marriage is made possible by the settlement of the divorce proceedings instituted by his actress wife, Ethel Levy, whose request for separation has been granted by the courts.

Cohan's income from his several plays is said to be $500,000 a year.

His first wife is soon to marry Robert Edeson, the actor.

DIXON HOST OF COLLEAGUES ON OCEAN CRUISE

Senators and Lessor Publicists Enjoy Hospitality of Old North End.

Senators and near-Senators up on the hill are talking over the cruise of the King Philip, and there isn't anything else doing at the State House today. It was a great trip. The opinion is unanimous.

Senator "Ned" Dixon of the Third Suffolk District—the "dear old North End"—had his revenge yesterday, when he took the State House bunch down the harbor on his "King Philip" steamer. The bunch was at least 200 strong. It included almost everybody, from Chaplain Horton of the Senate and Sergeant-at-Arms Remington, down the list to Luigi Badaracco, who trots to one of the newspapers with "copy."

Around Minot's Light.

The King Philip makes daily trips out of Boston to the fishing grounds. Yesterday's sprint was about 25 miles, down around Minot's Light and back.

Senator-Commander Dixon is roundabout 60, gray, handsome and ruddy. Up in the pilot house, in his natty cap of blue and gold, he told the reporters how it came about.

"I've been sitting up there ever since New Year's," he said, "and saying nothing. I got the clam bill through all right, with the help of 'Bill' Bullock, and I was never far away when the North End wanted anything, but I wasn't talking. Maybe it was imagination, but lately I got to thinking that there was something like a sneer in the eyes of Frank Linehan, young Buttrick, Jim Vahey, Bill Hayes, Arthur Taft and more of the spouters whenever they looked at me. 'Where do you fit in a Senate?' I suppose they were asking, 'you can't talk.'

"Well, I got to thinking that there might be something that I could do that none o' the rest can do, and, boys, here we are:

They Were All at Sea.

"Suppose I quit the job right here, could Chapple get 'em back with his gavel, or any of the rest of 'em with their hot air? No, sir. Once they're really at sea—and, dear knows, they've been at sea right there in the Senate chamber many's the time this session—it takes Dixon to get 'em back again. Now, go below and see what the cook's been doing."

Down below there were chicken salads and lobster salads, rolls, sherberts, frozen puddings, coffee and a whole lot of nicecoolstuff.

George and John J. Dixon went along to help their popular pa entertain his guests. Councilman Tom O'Brien helped, too. And everybody came home satisfied that Dixon of the North End knows how to steer things.

REAL SUMMER BRINGS THRONG TO VANITY FAIR

Beautiful Rhode Island Resort Crowded with Advent of "Rare" June Day.

SCORES OF ATTRACTIONS.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 8.—Given a day of genuine Summer weather, like yesterday for instance, and Vanity Fair, Rhode Island's magnificent amusement resort four miles down the Providence river, is crowded with pleasure seekers.

Never has such an undertaking started out under such auspicious circumstances—when the weather permits. The great open-air, free circus at Vanity Fair is proving to be one of the greatest of the scores of drawing attractions. The exhibitions are the best that money can buy and each week the program is changed. The best acrobats are employed in the circus and they are generous in the amount of work they do for the public.

The great Fire show, one of the best of its kind, the critics say, furnished thrills to thousands yesterday, throngs packing the great grandstand, which holds two thousand people.

The warmer weather also had its effect on the clam bake and College Inn, for the crowds had ravenous appetites which the chefs of the excellent restaurants were kept busy in satisfying.

The transportation facilities are being steadily augmented. The management of the car line places more cars at the disposal of the public hourly each day. The Consolidated's electric trains are loaded to their capacity.

ANTY DRUDGE
Fels-Naptha Soap

Anty Drudge Talks to the Ladies' Aid.

Mrs. Ladiesaid—"We want you to attend our Mothers' Meeting at the Church to-morrow afternoon. Sister Tompkins is going to talk on the downtrodden women of China."

Anty Drudge—"Downtrodden nothing! If women could figure out how to make their own burdens a bit lighter—they'd be pleasanter people to live with. There's Mrs. Dontry, next door: Her husband's a railroader, and she's always bewailing the way she has to scrub on his clothes. Now, if she used Fels-Naptha soap, in cold or lukewarm water, according to the simple directions on the wrapper, they'd wash themselves in thirty minutes."

"Washing clothes" means the loosening and separating of dirt from fabric. You can start the dirt by boiling, and loosen it by stirring in a washing-machine or hard rubbing on a washboard.—You can do it this way at the expense of fuel, the discomfort of an overheated house, the nuisance of steaming suds, and to the injury of the clothes and the back-breaking hurt to yourself.

Or you can let Fels-Naptha take the place of the boiling, stirring and hard rubbing, and save fuel, do away with the discomfort and nuisance and prevent injury to clothes and hurt to yourself. Fels-Naptha with lukewarm or cold water—never with hot.

Fels-Naptha soap also sets colors. You know that even the so-called fast colors are likely to "run" some the first time the material is washed with ordinary soap the old-fashioned way. They will not do this if Fels-Naptha soap is used according to directions on wrapper. Don't forget the wrapper is red and green.

Fels-Naptha is the only cold water soap that has withstood the test of time.

LAJOIE'S WARRIORS HERE FOR BATTLE

In full battle array the Naps got into the Hub this morning ready for several encounters with the Pilgrims at the Back Bay pasture.

After licking the Highlanders three straight the Cleveland boys felt pretty frisky and are now flying high for pennant honors.

It looks like one of the biggest crowds of the early season at the links, as the Naps are the big card, and with the changes lately in the ranks of the locals the interest has been on the jump to get a line on what's going to happen.

There will be an outburst of enthusiasm for Jack Knight, the young star whom Connie Mack traded for Jimmy Collins, and unless the Quaker lad fees a bit nervous on his first appearance the fans may be prepared to see some slick third corner playing which will make their hearts glad. He will have a tough job to keep in step with Bradley, the Naps' third sacker, who has no superior in the business.

Then it will be the final appearance of Bob Unglaub in the role of manager of the team, as Jim Maguire, who was signed last night to sit on the bench, will be on deck at the next game.

The result of the contest has a lot hanging in the balance, as a loss and a win by Washington means last place for the team, and it's a hard position to get out of when once settled there.

The Naps are going like the wind just now and figure on making this first Eastern appearance a record breaker. It will take a lot of high grade playing to trip them, but after the hard struggles over in New York, they may be a little fine for facing the Pilgrims, who were stung pretty badly by the Tigers, who got away with two out of three in the series.

One of the young pitchers, either Oberlin or Pruett will occupy the box to tumble the Naps, and they will go the limit of the wings.

Hess or Bernhardt will be called on by Lajoie.

Ralph Glaze made a strong effort to prevent the Tigers from taking the final game yesterday, but his opponents managed to squeeze out the tallies successfully in small numbers and his team mates could do nothing with Eddie Siever, to speak of, till the middle of the game, when they threatened to settle his job for him and Hugh Jennings hurried him away, while "Wild Bill" Donovan took up the commission when the score was tied in the fifth and held command to the finish.

ANDOVER IN ANNUAL GAME WITH EXETER

ANDOVER, June 8.—Phillips Academy will send a strong nine to Exeter today for the annual diamond championship contest with Phillips Exeter.

Andover is stronger in the field than at bat, while conditions on the opposing nine are said to be exactly the reverse. Although the Andover nine has made a better showing this season than its rival, the sentiment here is that Exeter will win. Andover's chances largely depend upon Pitcher Belford, who is a clever twirler, but has had no experience in championship games.

Since the schools first met on the diamond in 1878 Andover has won 18 games and scored 202 runs. Exeter has won nine of the contests and made 129 runs. Andover has never been shut out by her rival, but Exeter failed to score in the games of 1901 and 1903. The last game won by the New Hampshire institution was in 1904, when Andover was defeated 2 to 1. Andover was the victor in 1905 by 6 to 4, and last year by 3 to 2.

GEORGE STARR TO TRAIN FOR CHISHOLM

Through changing of trainers, W. B. Chisholm, the noted Cleveland horseman, has secured the services of George Starr, who back in the days of Beacon Park, in Allston, worked his apprenticeship training trotters and pacers under the late John Riley, in the place of Ben Kenney, handler of his horses the past five years.

This year will be the first since 1903 that Starr has done any sulky riding, through that season having met with an accident at Readville during the Grand Circuit meeting which fractured his kneecap, but he is now in good physical condition.

While Starr has been down the circuit with such rare performers as Flying Jib, 2:04; Planet, 2:04¾; Direst, 2:05¼, etc., there is every reason to anticipate he will have in the Chisholm string the equal, if not better, than he ever faced the starting judge with.

It was only a few weeks ago that the pacing stallion Blacklock, 2:07¼, and a trial last year of 1:59½, was added to the stable at a cost of $17,500. If he does what is expected fully $35,000 worth of stakes will be credited to him when the campaign closes next Fall.

With all his known speed it should be handy for him to pace three heats right in 2:03, and the past history of the stakes in which he is entered shows that heats in the neighborhood of 2:05 have generally taken away the money. This makes it look like all Blacklock needs is to hold his form through the season to head the list of money winners in the pacing division.

Others that Starr will bring along are the trotting mare Allie Jay, 2:08¾, which is extensively staked; Mary Gage, 2:11½, a trotter good in her class; Adele Margrave (2), 2:29, and Thistle Doune, that cost $5,000 when a yearling, both in the futurities; Reproachless, a green pacer in the C. and C. stake at Detroit, and Miss Adbell (3), 2:14¾, in numerous pacing stakes down the line.

JIM M'GUIRE, NEW HUB MANAGER

JIM M'GUIRE WILL MANAGE PILGRIMS

Pilgrims Have Had Many Managers

Chick Stahl — Committed suicide at West Baden.

Cy Young — Temporary manager for a few days, but declined to continue.

George Huff — Manager for thirteen days, then quit.

Bob Unglaub — Manager till President Taylor could find the right man.

Jim McGuire — Present manager.

News by the wholesale was handed out to the fans of the Hub yesterday, when the first startling announcement came that Johnny Knight of the Athletics had been traded for Jimmy Collins. And this morning, before the fans had hardly recovered from the surprise, comes the information that Jim McGuire, the veteran of twenty-three campaigns on the diamond, is to be the manager of the Pilgrims.

Since the resignation of George Huff, the University of Illinois instructor, the burden has been carried by George Unglaub, who found that the double duties as captain-manager were rather irksome, and though Bob would have stuck it out to the end, President Taylor knew that for the best interests of the team it demanded a bench manager, and he kept his eyes open for a suitable man.

In McGuire he believes that he has secured the proper eprsonage, and if seasoning counts for anything, then he certainly has.

Clark Griffiths reluctantly assented to let McGuire go from under his wing, as the great leader of the Highlanders realized what a valuable assistant he had in Jim, but President Farrell of the New York team helped matters along.

Maguire will report today to the team, but will not assume his duties till Monday.

HOW TAYLOR DID IT.

President Taylor was asked how he came to pick out the veteran James McGuire as a manager of his club.

"It was like this," said Mr. Taylor, "when Unglaub was asked to take the place left open by Mr. Huff, it was understood that I was to look out for a bench manager. I looked the field over and inquired about several experienced players, and by accident got into conversation with McGuire, who struck me as being a very well informed baseball man. He seemed to have the respect of the players as well as the public. He had been trained by the best managers, and it struck me that he might accept a chance to show what he could do with a club badly in need of valuable advice, so I asked him one day while the New York team was here if he would consider a proposition to manage the Boston club.

"He promptly replied that nothing would suit him better if he could get away from New York. I immediately got into communicated with Frank Farrell, the owner of the New York Highlanders, and found Mr. Farrell delighted with the idea of giving his trusty player a chance, so we closed the bargain, and I sent McGuire to meet me in Boston last Thursday, and we closed the deal, and he will take charge of the team next Monday.

"McGuire will be given absolute control of the team, and will have my hearty co-operation in building up a winner."

McGuire has for some time acted as scout for the New York club, as well as playing good ball when called upon to go in.

VET ON DIAMOND.

Jim McGuire has played major league baseball for twenty-three years, and is still a fine batsman as well as a grand good catcher. He will coach the team in uniform, and go in now and then for a timely hit in place of some weak batsman. Jim made his first big hit with the Toledo club of the American Association in 1884, catching forty games. He went to Detroit in '85 for one year. The next three years he was with the Philadelphia club. In '89 he was with the Washington club and went to Cleveland, his home city, in '90 as a member of the Player's League.

The next year he was with the Washington club, where he remained nearly nine years, his release being purchased by the Brooklyn club in '99. For two years he and Charley Farrell did all the catching for the league champions of that city under Ed Hanlon.

In 1902 he jumped the National League for the Detroit club of the American League, where he remained two years, and was secured from that club for the New York Highlanders.

BILL DINNEEN TRADED TO ST. LOUIS

Big Bill Dinneen, the hero of many hard-fought battles on both the South End and the Huntington avenue grounds, will to-day cease to be a member of the Boston American league club, for he was traded to the St. Louis Americans last night for Pitcher Jacobsen and a cash bonus of $1,500.

Dinneen came to Boston in the same trade that brought "Bucky" Freeman to the city, both of them coming from the Washingtons.

For several years he played with the National league team, but later joined the Americans with Collins and until last year was accounted one of the best twirlers in the business.

Negotiations for the trade have been going on for some time, but it was not until yesterday that Manager McAleer of the St. Louis team notified President Taylor that he would pay the price.

BIG BOUT AT MANCHESTER

Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence and Jim Donovan of New York have been matched to meet at Manchester, N. H., on June 17. They were scheduled to hook up May 30, but Donovan was obliged to cancel, and lost his posted forfeit.

It will be one of the best bouts that has ever taken place in New England, as both are the cleverest in their class and the winner will be in line to meet the best in the country.

HOT SCHOOL GAME TO-DAY.

The final clash between Somerville High and Dorchester High will take place today at Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester. This is Dorchester Day, and an exceptionally large crowd is expected at the game. Owing to the many attractions, parade and other events, the start of the game has been postponed until 4 o'clock instead of the usual hour, 3:15.

Special to the Boston American.

PITTSBURG, June 8.—It did not look as though the Doves and Pirates would participate in their last game to-day, as the grounds were wet and heavy after the grounds were wet and heavy after the soaking.

Yesterday's contest was played under the worst conditions, the teams flopping around in the slippery drizzle.

Though the Pirates have already won two games the Doves are still in the hunt for the final clash, if the teams face each other.

The closeness of the second game gave the fans a good idea of the strength of the Hubites, and they are wise to the fact that the Smoketown brigade will have to move some to keep in the running.

President Dovey is much disappointed that his boys did not get one of the two games already played, as he wanted to show Barney Dreyfuss, who put him into major league ball, that he could get together a ball nine which could cope with his big salary crowd.

But the showing yesterday when the Pirates had the hardest kind of trouble to win out by the score of 5 to 4 was some balm for the new president, and it was all the more aggravating to him to lose by a hair.

It was all due to "Little Cy" Young getting his bumps in one inning when the game apparently looked safe. The south-paw seemed to have everything at his command and was going along smoothly when the upset came.

The Doves had their batting clothes on and put Leever to the woods and Deacon Phillippi had to be called from his fireside.

If it clears up Tenney would like to send Pat Flaherty to the mound and Smoketown fans expect to see the Pirates walk the plank with the Carnegie boy working. If the game can only be played, one of the best crowds of the season will probably turn out to see the sport, and more especially to witness the annihilation of their team by the popular Flaherty.

Fred Clarke will have either Mike Lynch or "Lefty" Liefield in readiness to hold down the pitching job.

GRACE BOND MOVING FAST OVER READVILLE TRACK

Trainer James Gatcomb has set a mark for the rest of the drivers at Readville to shoot at with their trotters and pacers, having worked Grace Bond (2:09¼) in 2:16½ and repeated in 2:17, the last half in 1:07, and final eighth in 15¼ seconds.

This mare is looking better and behaving in the best possible way, and gives every promise of repeating the good campaign she made when a three-year-old and headed the summary of the rich Kentucky Futurity.

Hiram Tozier offered Gatcomb $2,500 for his two-year-old pacing filly Nelly Audubon, by Audubon Boy (1:59¼), out of Nelly Nick (2:20¼), by Quartermaster, but he turned the proposition down without the quiver of an eyelash. He has stepped her an eighth to cart in 16¼ seconds, a 2:09 gait.

Clark at Narragansett.

Fred Clark left Readville track for Narragansett in order to work his horses over the half-mile course, as the latter part of this month he intends racing them in the Pennsylvania circuit, which is over two-lap rings.

The best mile any of the matinee drivers have gone to date is 2:24¾ by George Graves, driving Mack Mack (2:08). In order to have their trotters and pacers in condition for the opening, June 22, there is great need of good weather and some faster miles under the belts of the contestants.

Every direction one turns at Readville is to be seen a Bingen or the get from sons of Bongen, in handling for the futurities of next Fall and 1908. It cannot help but be noted that in every instance each trainer believes he has the peer of them all, which speaks well for the high quality of the breed.

The following gives a list in the trainers' charge at the track: Titer has nine by Bingen, and one by a son of that stallion; John Young has one by Bingen, and six by Bingara; Henry Topham has three of Bingen's; D. W. Caton has two by Bingen, four by Aquilin, and one by Todd; Bob Proctor has a couple by Bingen, while Millard Drinkwater and Ed Bither have one each.

Praise for Sonoma Girl.

Gatcomb, who has seen much of the California trotting wonder, Sonoma Girl, that is entered in $168,000 worth of stakes in the Grand Circuit this year, said to-day he thinks when Highball strikes her in the $10,000 M. and M. Stake at Detroit his name will be "Lowball," as she should tramp on 2:05 in the race, if necessary to win. He saw her go a mile at Los Angeles in 2:10, with the middle half in only 1:10, making the first and last quarters each in thirty seconds. Then all she wears is a pair of ankle boots behind and is the sweetest-gaited trotter one ever set eyes on.

Secretary Charles Jewett has called down the praise of the trainers by cleaning out all of the disreputable grooms that have made Readville a camping ground during the Spring. Many who won't work have laid around the stalls intoxicated. Some have been arrested and the remainder given their walking papers. Mr. Jewett intends in the future having the track in all ways desirable enough so any woman can visit the horses and matters will be equally as clean as at their own homes. It is bound to add a lot to the sport of racing.

JOCKEY MILLER IS SUSPENDED

NEW YORK, June 8.—As a result of his alleged rough riding at Gravesend yesterday, Jockey Miller was suspended by the stewards for one week and fined $200. Miller was held responsible for an accident in the last race in which two boys narrowly escaped being killed when their mounts fell.

The start in the race was near the judges' stand, and when the barrier was sprung Miller, who was on the outside with Brother Thomas, cut across his field in an endeavor to get the rail. This caused considerable crowding, and Will Do, with Swain up, and Helen Porter, driven by W. Doyle, fell in the midst of the big field.

Both boys were injured, but how badly the doctor was unable to say. It was reported that Swain was seriously injured. They were taken to the Emergency Hospital. Miller finished second, but his mount was disqualified.

Barbary Bell, at 5 to 2, won the May stakes. Four favorites won.

Do YOU Ever Get Discouraged?

Remember That Your Chances Are Apt to Be Brightest Just When YOU Think Them Blackest

More than one of our readers have written letters expressing discouragement. A man whose letter indicates thought, intelligence and ambition writes, among other things:

> "I have done my best; I have really tried to be of use to other people while looking after my own interests and the interest of my family. Yet I feel that I have made no headway, that all the effort has gone for nothing. Is the world really controlled by benevolence, or is it controlled by luck and chance?"

The world is ruled by JUSTICE. We come into it subject to certain regulations, certain fixed punishments for definite transgressions.

The laws governing us are ETERNAL and UNCHANGING. When a body falls from a roof it is dashed to the ground and destroyed, whether it be the body of an innocent child or that of a murderer. The law of gravitation knows no favorites.

The same laws for all and the same results from like action—such is the law under which we live. It is just and calculated to make men think, struggle and develop.

Discouragement is often a good sign. The man who is not discouraged about himself is SATISFIED ABOUT HIMSELF. And satisfaction with one's self means LACK OF GROWTH. THE MAN WHO IS CONTENTED has stopped growing. The man who worries and feels discouraged is probably the coming man.

The greatest men that have lived have gone through periods of black discouragement. We wish that our readers could know this and take heart in their own discouraged hours.

Napoleon with all his glory still ahead of him was tempted to kill himself at one time. And he was tempted to marry a rich, fat old woman without loving her—which is even worse.

Henry George, whose splendid character has set so good an example to the world, was reduced almost to crime, and he was reduced practically to starvation.

A man far greater than Napoleon or any monarch that ever lived was Abraham Lincoln, and his mind, over and over, was filled with the deepest discouragement before he had even begun to do his great work for his nation and for the world.

When he was beaten by Douglas in his race for the Senate he really believed that the end of his career had come. He wrote to a friend:

> "I am glad I made the late race. It gave me a hearing on the great and durable question of the age which I could have had in no other way; and THOUGH I NOW SINK OUT OF VIEW AND SHALL BE FORGOTTEN, I BELIEVE I HAVE MADE SOME MARKS WHICH WILL TELL FOR THE CAUSE OF CIVIL LIBERTY LONG AFTER I AM GONE."

If Lincoln could sink so low in despondency and rise later to the wonderful work that we owe to him, there is no reason for any man to be finally discouraged or give up.

A fine sword takes a great deal of brutal hammering before it has the edge and the temper to cut. And the man who is going to amount to anything must be forged, hammered and sharpened by disappointment, disillusion and discouragement. No real man can go through life like a steer fattening for the butcher. It takes storms, trouble and discouragement to form a character worth anything.

Get your German neighbor to translate this from Goethe:

> "Es bildet ein Talent sich in der Stille.
> Sich ein Charakter in dem Strom der Welt."

Lincoln doing his best, absolutely sincere, was subjected to the vilest abuse in addition to suffering defeat. There was no insult that was not flung at him. There was no shameful accusation not made against his pure character.

Over and over he must have wished himself out of the fight, and many times, as we know, he was discouraged and felt that his life had failed.

Remember that he had lack of early education to fight with, he had poverty to keep him back, he had early failure in business—through no fault of his own—which loaded him with a debt difficult to pay. He had poor relatives hanging upon him. But while he DID get discouraged, and while he expressed this discouragement, HE KEPT ON TRYING AND WAS READY FOR THE NEXT THING AS SOON AS IT CAME.

We have quoted this extract from Lincoln's letter to-day believing that it will give encouragement to other good men temporarily discouraged, who need to be reminded that darkness DOES precede the light, that no man has ever climbed the hill of success and achievements without going through the deep valley of discouragement that lies on this side of the big mountain.

Shall Massachusetts Govern New Hampshire?

By James MacKaye

THE Springfield Republican has recently been poking fun at the suggestion that the State of Massachusetts assume control of the Boston & Maine railroad to save it from falling into the hands of the New Haven road. It claims that such a policy would give Massachusetts four representatives in the United States Senate, instead of two, since the New Hampshire Legislature which elects New Hampshire Senators would, as a constituent part of the Boston & Maine system, be transferred to Massachusetts with the road which owns it.

I wonder if the Republican appreciates the significance of its utterance. It is true that whatever power acquires the Boston & Maine system acquires not only its road bed, terminal facilities, rolling stock and other tangible property, but all accessories required for its undisturbed operation, including the Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont Legislatures, a fair share of the Massachusetts Legislature, besides sundry State railroad commissions.

All these are incidental accessories of the Boston & Maine railroad, and when the rest of the property of the road is transferred will be "thrown in" for good measure. The Republican is correct in saying that such properties go with the road as the most important part of its "good will," and when the New Haven acquires the Boston & Maine system it will, of course, acquire its good will.

Now comes the joke. THE REPUBLICAN CITES THIS AS AN ARGUMENT AGAINST GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP. It says: The railroads own the State Legislatures. Therefore the States ought not to own the railroads, BECAUSE IF THEY DID THEY WOULD HAVE TO OWN THEIR OWN LEGISLATURES. This, of course, would be dangerous, radical, socialistic, etc.

Government ownership of railroads would involve the serious fault of doing away with railroad ownership of government and, according to the Republican, would make United States Senators the representatives of a State instead of a railroad.

The Republican thinks that this suggestion is one of the funniest and most impractical it ever heard of. No wonder the Herald notices the Republican's good joke in an editorial called "The Laugh," in which it says: "There's no harm in shooting folly as it flies, and government ownership is fair game."

Yes, the joke is a good one, and "The Laugh" is on the people because they don't see it. It is, indeed, folly to suggest that a United States Senator from New Hampshire should represent anything but a railroad. If it cannot be the Boston & Maine, then by all means let it be the Ne

STEEL

TRUE AS STEEL was the saying in the days when the makers were true,
And earnest and honest their purpose in whatever their hands found to do;
But now the usurper dollar has conquered the common weal,
As false as their leaden lifebuoys is the treacherous servant, steel.

What recks the sleek director, so long as his profit swells,
That disaster and death are sold with the flaw-pitted steel that he sells.
Why should he care, he argues, since he lacks not for frequent sales.
That a broken reed is surer than one of his rotten rails—

So the flying train reels over......And reading, with unctuous nod,
The smug director murmurs, "Ah well! 'Twas the will of God."

Ghosts?—and the echoes of cries from that horrible rending crash?—
Pooh! Ghosts don't trouble the soul that is proofed with a coating of cash.

TRUE AS STEEL was the saying in the days of the true-hearted men—
Away with the faking and shamming and let it be true again.

The Financier

Rudolf Cashboy was kicking his heels against his ivory chair.

"What is the matter, Rudolf?" asked his father.

"Henry Jabbs has an island and a lake."

"Henry Jabbs's father has a billion."

"Well, I wish I had a rich father." And Rudolf sobbed piteously.

"I can't bear it," said Rudolf's father later, as he talked to his wife. "The poor child has none of the toys he should have. Why, oh, why, have I only fifteen million dollars?"

"Fifteen million!" he repeated hopelessly.

In the nursery little Rudolf howled and smashed rare Chinese vases with his little cane. "I will be rich when I grow up," he said with a curious air of finality.

(To be continued.)

Hospital surgeons complain that they get too much chicken. Lots of healthy persons would like to have the complaint in a chronic form.

The Diary of a Deer

WE saw a Man to-day. The others ran like mad, and I scooted with them, although the new animal seemed harmless. He has no horns and stands on his hind legs in a ridiculous way. The others said he was very dangerous, worse than a wolf, in fact, and that he could kill me ever so far away.

Saw the same Man again to-day. He was watching me a long time, and didn't seem to want to hunt me, although he had a funny black box in his hand.

Same Man there again to-day. He had another with him and when I came on them suddenly, he looked up and the box he had went click! As I jumped in the air I heard the Man say to his companion, "Gee, this will be a peach of a photo."

Getting to know the Man. See him every day, and he doesn't seem dangerous. Others warn me every day not to trust Men any more than wolves, but they must be wrong. Man has clicked the black box at me several times, but nothing has hurt me.

Heard Man say to his companion to-day, "Well, I must get back to town to-day. It's been a great time here in the woods, and I've got some bully pictures. I hope our pal the deer will always have as happy a time in the forest as I've had."

Man has gone away. Told the others they were foolish to be so afraid of him, but they said Men would kill any animal they met.

Strange Man in woods to-day. Caught a glimpse of him, when a flash and a terrible noise sent me flying through the trees. Heard Man say, "Dash it, I missed him."

Think I shall be dead before morning. Hope so, anyway, to get out of this suffering. Saw the strange Man to-day. He pointed something at me, the way the other Man did the black box. I stopped to look, and the Man said, "Looks like a picture by one of those nature fakers." In an instant there was a flash, and something tore a terrible hole in my side. "Good shot," said the Man. "This is what I call sport." I staggered off, and he said to a companion: "No use following him. He'll lie down and bleed to death, and we can get him in the morning."

Why and Wherefore

Average Salary of Clergymen

Editor of BOSTON AMERICAN:

Sir—I would be greatly obliged to you if you would let me know the average salary of the ministers in this country.

R. F. JANES.

[The average annual salary of the clergymen of the country is $480.]

Wage Earners and Their Earnings

Editor of BOSTON AMERICAN:

Sir—Will you kindly state the number of wage earners in the United States, together with the sum-total paid to them in wages?

WORKINGMAN

[There are 20,000,000 wage receivers in the United States—that is, persons employed depending entirely upon wages paid. The average wage is $400, making $8,000,000,000 (eight billions) as the grand total paid out in wages.]

Our Per Capita Wealth.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Sir—If the entire wealth of the United States were distributed among the people in equal proportion, how much would each person have?

N. M. A.

(If the wealth of the country had been equally divided in the year 1900, it would have given each individual, including babies, $1,235, or each family $5,000. But as the country is many billions richer now than it was shown to be by the census of 1900, the per capita sum would to-day be much larger—probably $1,500 to the single person, or $6,000 to the family.)

The Cotton Plant

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Sir—Did cotton, like potatoes and tobacco, originate in this country?

HENRY WILSON.

(The cotton plant did not originate in America. Its original habitat is unknown, but the culture and manufacture of cotton were known in India and other Eastern lands for ages before America was discovered.)

Little Editorials from the People

THE "EXTRAVAGANT" POOR

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I call your attention to a recent article in the Boston Globe relative to the increased prices in meats, in which a certain retailer criticizes the workingman for his expensive tastes. The dealer had little use for the toiler who could not satisfy himself with the cheaper cuts of meat and cited an instance where a customer insisted on a most expensive steak, similar to one just sold to a professional man, and presumably a man of means.

The tenor of the article is enough to make the thinking workingman indignant. The workingman feels that he is entitled to the best the market can afford. He knows that he has to produce the food and clothes not only for himself and family, but also for the professional man, the business man, the idle rich, vagrants and other dependents. Most workingmen are poor because they are not stingy, because they spend their money as they earn it. The chances are that this dealer was a grouchy tight-wad when he was young and saved up the pennies he should have spent for food. He has been living on some unnatural diet if those are his sentiments.

But I am sorry to say that there are lots of people as benighted as he who think that the workingman is but a dog to fetch and carry and take whatever is thrown at him and to follow his religious teachings and be content.

TRAIN LIFE SAVERS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It has often occurred to me that my lack of knowledge as to the proper method to pursue in the case of a person being rescued from drowning when I might be present would cause me to regret the fact the rest of my life.

I have many times read printed instructions as to what to do, yet I believe I would be "all at sea" if the emergency occurred.

Now I am a frequent attendant at the L street baths. So are thousands of other business men. I am going to suggest that you use your tremendous power in such matters to advocate the establishment of an hour of instruction each day during the coming season. It will not necessarily cost the Bath Department one cent. There are men at this house who understand this matter thoroughly. Suppose each day a practical illustration is given of the proper thing to do in rescuing or resuscitating a person from drowning. There will be before the season ends thousands of men whose knowledge will or may be invaluable in some great crisis.

I am writing you as I know that if the idea impressed you as good, you will do the rest.

—W. J. CORBETT, JR.

P. S.—Thousands of men in the early Summer beofre starting on their vacations will become so well schooled that it is hard to estimate the tremendous value of this.
